Capitol Hill Bloc to Fight Ban on PWA Power Funds

Threat Voiced to Keep Congress in Session Until 'Frost.'

June 15 Proposed For Adjournment

House Struggle Opens Today on Modified Wage-Hour Bill.

A threat to keep Congress in session "until frost—a killing frost"—came yesterday from the angry public power bloc on Capitol Hill, determined to block prohibition of the use of PWA funds for municipal power projects.

Stirred by the Senate Appropriations Committee's adoption of such an amendment to the huge spending-lending recovery bill, the bloc laid plans immediately—first to prevent Senate acceptance of the provision, and next to avoid House acquiescence if the Senate should accept it.

June 1 adjournment plans were abandoned, meanwhile, and the tentative date for the end of the session moved up half a month, as the most important and controversial measures still before Congress faced stiff fights in both houses, beginning today.

While the Senate takes up the recovery bill, reported Saturday by the Appropriations Committee, the House will be opening again the struggle over the modified wage-hour bill, forced onto the floor from the hostile Rules Committee by means of a majority petition.

While the measure is expected to pass the House, it will not be until after a determined effort to revise it or substitute for it a Southern-sponsored version. Even after expected House passage, the Administration-desired bill must overcome serious Senate opposition, perhaps even a filibuster, before it can be sent to the White House.

Before the two major fights open in House and Senate, President Roosevelt will go over the legislative situation—and strategy——in a conference with leaders of both houses.

No indication has been given as to whether the President will seek elimination of the restriction on PWA's power program.

The threat of Congressional deliberations until fall came from Representative Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, who said:

"We will hold Congress in session till frost—a killing frost—before the House will agree to the proposed Senate amendments emasculating the Administration's power

Bulgarians Begin Parliament, Their First for 4 Years

Sofia, May 22 (AP).—Bulgaria returned to ostensibly democratic rule today after four years of dictatorial rule by King Boris III.

The formal change came with the opening of the twenty-fourth ordinary national assembly selected in March elections.

The King urged the new deputies to take confidence from the near past and to co-operate "by new means and in a new manner" for the well-being of Bulgaria.

Divorce Starts Drive to Crush Atlanta Graft

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, May 22.—Special Prosecutor E. E. Andrews shook a sheaf of indictments charging officers here with taking bribes and said today, "that's only a beginning, we're going to yank out graft by the roots."

There were true bills against six former Fulton County (Atlanta) deputy sheriffs, 11 Atlanta policemen, a convict camp clerk and the clerk's helper in the packet—the result of day and night labor since last fall.

"So far," said Andrews, "this graft probe has involved mostly liquor 'protection' cases, but we're going into every line of vice before we stop. We've got the lever we needed to work with and the funny part is that it came out of a routine divorce case."

Rumors of "protection" buying and various grafting had circulated here for months, said Andrews, but witnesses were reluctant and the inquiry got nowhere until "Pee Wee" Burns, convicted bootlegger, began having arguments with his wife.

"Finally," Andrews said, "she sued him for divorce and asked a property settlement. She brought into court some papers showing he had bought property under other names. In these, some slips turned up showing fairly regular payments of $25 and upward 'for ice' to individuals represented by initials.

Labor Bloc Fails to Pick La Follette

By the Associated Press.

Madison, Wis., May 22.—The Wisconsin Farmer-Labor-Progressive Federation today rejected a move to name Gov. Philip La Follette, president of the new National Progressive Party, as its nominee for Governor, but left the way open for its executive board to select La Follette if he enters the race.

The convention unanimously indorsed Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee's Socialist mayor, as Progressive candidate for United States Senator.

Cheering delegates voted down Hoan's flat refusal to run for the senatorship, and insisted he be drafted for that office. F.-L.-P. convention leaders characterized Hoan as a man who could carry forward the national political movement in which the farm-labor element will be a potent factor.

Name Governor's Friend.

The convention applauded when the secretary ruled out Gov. La Follette's name as the indorsee for re-election because he is not a member of the federation, but it took no stand for or against the National Progressive Party.

The Wisconsin Federation indorsed as its candidate for Governor one of La Follette's closest friends, Secretary of State Theodore Dammann. Political observers took this to mean that if La Follette, who has not yet announced his personal plans, decides to run for re-election, Dammann would withdraw and again be candidate for secretary of State.

The federation is composed of nine organizations and encompasses the A. F. of L., C. I. O., Socialist and Progressive Parties, the Workers' Alliance (an organization of unemployed), Railroad Brotherhoods, and three farm groups. Since it was organized in 1935, La Follette has declined to join the federation, but many of his associates in legislative and county organizations are members.

Hope for Affiliation.

La Follette's advisers said they foresaw no complications in the F.-L.-P. convention action, and it would have no effect on the new party organization. La Follette had not asked for an indorsement.

All resolutions pertaining to the National Progressives and to expansion of the federation movement in other States were sidetracked by the convention and referred to its new executive board.

U. S. Writer Sees Chinese Rout by Air

Flight in Japanese Plane Shows Troops Running From Invaders.

By Elmer W. Peterson.

With the Japanese Armies on the Central China War Front, May 22 (AP).—I witnessed the Chinese-Japanese war from the air today.

Flying over an area 25 miles long and 15 miles wide I saw evidence that the Chinese were broken, desperate and bewildered in the face of the onrushing Japanese legions.

At the height of 500 feet over Suchow I saw Japanese troops in full possession of that important railway junction.

The rising sun flag was floating over the city and Japanese soldiers, tanks and trucks were everywhere.

Mission Is Intact.

Sections of the city were blasted into ruins by artillery and air bombardment, but the damage did not appear as great as had been expected.

Circling three times over the railway junction I saw the Southern Presbyterian Mission intact. The stars and stripes painted on the roof of the slate gray building were clearly visible.

From here we flew for two hours through the very center of the battle zone where the Japanese say

Treaty Violations Make New Agreements Unjustified, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, contends Japan must "remedy the wrong" done in treaty violations against China before the United States would be justified in signing a new nonaggression pact with her.

Holds Pact Unnecessary.

He took this position in an interview when asked for comment on a recent statement by Koki Hirota, the Japanese foreign minister. Hirota had raised the question of this Government's willingness to enter into a nonaggression agreement with Japan.

Pittman said he was satisfied the Foreign Relations Committee would not look with favor on such a treaty, nor would the Senate be willing to ratify it at the present time.

"Our Government does not have to be bound by treaty to prevent it from engaging in acts of aggression against Japan," he said in response to further questions. "Japan's contempt for and violation of treaties would be no assurance to the United States.

Speaks for Self Only.

"Until Japan remedies the wrong done in her violation of the Covenant of the League of Nations and the Nine-Power Treaty in her aggressions against China, no government, in my opinion, is justified in entering into a political treaty with her.

"Our Government holds that Japan has violated and now is violating a treaty of nonaggression with the United States—namely, the Nine-Power Treaty—through her willful invasion and attempted con-

Plane Tries Attack Again On Cardenas

Federal Craft Drives It Away, But Fails to Capture It.

Government Reinforces Expedition, Maps Cavalry Mop-Up.

By the Associated Press.

San Luis Potosi, Mexico, May 22. Federal combat craft today drove off a rebel plane which made a second attempt to bomb the Villa Hermosa residence of President Cardenas.

A fast transport bomber, identified by authorities as one of two planes in possession of the rebel chieftain, Saturnino Cedillo, dropped four bombs near Cardenas' field headquarters yesterday.

The bombs, apparently 25-pounders, dug up the earth along a nearby airfield where Cardenas had stationed an air squadron to help put down the Cedillo rebellion, but did no other damage.

Escapes Pursuit.

Villa Hermosa is 3 miles from San Luis Potosi, the headquarters of Cardenas' campaign. Guards around the villa were increased following yesterday's air attack.

The rebel raider did not get close enough to drop bombs as it did yesterday, and easily outdistanced pursuit planes.

Meanwhile, Mateo Hernandez Netro, governor of San Luis Potosi, disappeared from his state capital leaving a note that designated the chief of the State supreme court as acting governor.

A group of other governors supporting President Cardenas last night told Hernandez Netro he must show quickly what side of the fence he is on. His disappearance followed.

The government reinforced its punitive expedition today and mapped a cavalry mop-up of Saturnino Cedillo's peasant army.

Cedillo Missing.

The defense ministry dispatched the Thirty-sixth Infantry Battalion from the capital early today to back up hard-riding cavalrymen among the 10,000 men Cardenas had concentrated in the provincial stronghold of the free lance strong man.

Actual warfare broke out yesterday when 200 cavalrymen clattered into Rio Verde, 60 miles east-southeast of the provincial capital, San Luis Potosi, and drove out a rebel force.

A government estimate put the number of men under Cedillo's command at 2,000—a marked reduction from the 18,000 to 20,000 credited to the agrarian leader before the outbreak.

3 British Sailors Hurt When Bombs Rain on Valencia

Valencia, Spain, May 22 (U.P.).—Three members of the crew of the British merchant ship Penchames were wounded seriously today when the vessel was bombed in an insurgent air raid on Valencia.

The decks of the British ship were badly damaged by the insurgent bombs.

One in Party of 5 U.S. Workers Drowns as 2 Canoes Capsize

Harbor police last night futilely searched the swirling waters of the Potomac River just below Chain Bridge for the body of Henry Kanczuka, 23-year-old State Department clerk, missing since 5:30 p. m., when a canoe in which he was riding with two companions capsized.

A second canoe, occupied by friends of the missing youth, also overturned in the swift water when the boys noticed the empty canoe of their chums float by and attempted to head the frail craft for shore.

Friends of Kanczuka, Irwin Behn, 20, and Albert Hanse, 25, both clerks employed by the State Department, and riding with him when the canoe upset, told police they saw his body sink several times before disappearing farther downstream. Behn and Hanse both managed to swim ashore.

Edward Fenig, 23, also a clerk at the State Department, and Carl Hanse, civilian employe in the Marine Corps, occupied the second boat, which capsized 200 yards below the point where Kanczuka disappeared. Hanse swam ashore, while Fenig was picked up by a passing motorboat.

According to Fenig, Kanczuka was able to swim but apparently was overcome by strong undercurrents. Several witnesses to the tragedy said they noticed occupants of the first canoe playing about in the small craft just before it capsized.

Mrs. Lillian Mackey, proprietor of a store near the Virginia end of Chain bridge, said members of the boating party visited the store shortly before the accident and remarked that they had been having trouble

Sudetens Again Refuse To Deal With Prague; Nazis Report 'Invasion'

France Breathes Easier, Believing London-Paris Demarches a Success.

Berlin Is Expected To Heed Warning

Czechs Won't Resort to Force Unless Attacked, Statesmen Feel.

By the United Press.

Paris, May 22.—Reassuring messages were exchanged between Paris and Prague today and the French government felt tension was on the wane in the Czechoslovakian crisis.

A foreign office spokesman said the government "considers with satisfaction the situation's improvement but continues a vigilant watch while the Czechs seek to negotiate with the Sudetens, giving them satisfaction on many points."

France reported assurances from London and Moscow that if France is drawn into war with Germany as a consequence of aiding the Czechs against aggression, Britain and Russia will join her. France feels secure behind the Maginot line and there is neither panic nor great anxiety at the prospect of war.

Czechs Say, "We'll Fight."

The French press credits the Franco-British demarches to Berlin with doing more than anything else to prevent direct German action in Czechoslovakia.

Prague messages to the French government today insisted the Czechs would not voluntarily resort to force to settle the minorities dispute, but contained the succinct warning: "We will fight if a single German soldier crosses the border."

Tension Less Acute.

The French foreign office, after tabulating telegrams today from all capitals, said the tension was less acute and professed conviction that Britain's friendly counsels will prevail in the end. A message from President Eduard Benes promised full inquiry into the fatal shooting of two Sudetens by Czech police—specific cause of the crisis—with assurance the killers would be punished if it were found they acted too hastily.

He also said Czechoslovakia did not plan further mobilization unless tension increased. The 80,000 reserves called to the colors yesterday have been stationed at strategic points in Czech border fortifications, he added.

D'Annunzio's Son Held as Runaway Plane Hits Woman

Farmingdale, N. Y., May 22 (U.P.).—Hugo D'Annunzio, son of the late Gabriele D'Annunzio, famed Italian poet, was held in $500 bail on a charge of third degree assault after a single motor plane, which he owned, crashed into an automobile near here and injured a woman.

Police said the young Italian flier was standing beside the plane on the flying field when it suddenly swung around in a gust of wind and struck D'Annunzio, knocking him to the ground.

The plane, according to spectators, rolled toward a road adjoining the field, where several autos were parked. The car in which Mrs. Susie H. Jones, 44, of Huntington, N. Y., sat was parked between another automobile and the fence. Mrs. Jones attempted to jump but the plane crashed into the car and she was pinned under the plane. Mrs. Jones was taken to a hospital, where her condition was reported as serious.

5 Identify Urchin As Peter Levine

Dallas, May 22 (AP).—One of two youths who munched sandwiches at a tavern here two nights ago was identified "positively" today as Peter Levine, 12-year-old son of a New Rochelle, N. Y., attorney, who was reported kidnaped three months ago.

Five persons, including Lee Hayes, the tavern proprietor, made the identification.

The youths, hungry and ragged, told Hayes they were without funds. Homer Sealy, former District Attorney's investigator, bought the boys sandwiches. The boy identified as Levine was not talkative.

Europe Watches Czechoslovakia

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.
KAMIL KROFTA, Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, who yesterday explained officially that his nation is calling out new troops to preserve internal order.

The tense situation throughout Europe caused by fear that German support of the Sudeten minority party demands in Czechoslovakia might provoke war was somewhat allayed yesterday. A summary follows:

PRAGUE—The Sudeten German Party refused to negotiate with the government as elections passed quietly.

BERLIN—Czechoslovakian soldiers were accused by a semiofficial German news agency of crossing the Bohemian border.

LONDON—The British cabinet discussed a proposal for dispatch of an "international army" to police Czechoslovakia.

PARIS—France reiterated her pledge to aid Czechoslovakia in case of German aggression.

ROME—Mussolini was reported as urging moderation in dealing with Sudeten-Czech crisis.

British Discuss Nazis' Plan to 'Police' Czechs

Cabinet Meets on Proposal to Send 'International Army' to Country.

By the United Press.

London, May 22.—The British cabinet met in emergency session late today and discussed a proposal, attributed to Germany's initiative, for dispatch of an "international army" to police Czechoslovakia, whose borders are flanked by the troops of four nations on warlike footing.

The suggestion was considered after Viscount Halifax, following day-long communication with Europe's worried chancelleries, conveyed to the cabinet ministers a grave German warning of the explosive possibilities in Czechoslovakia.

London heard that while Czechoslovakia and Germany moved thousands of troops up to the Bohemian frontier for "extraordinary maneuvers," Poland's troops were close to the Slovakian border and Hungary was taking "certain military measures" on the south.

Britain, the cabinet decided, must refrain from taking sides in the Czech-Nazi dispute if its role of peacemaker is to succeed, and new approaches will be made to Berlin and Prague.

The Czechs will be urged to make every effort to avoid incidents while Germany will be asked to induce a more moderate tone toward Czechoslovakia in the Nazi press and to be more patient.

Czechs Crossed Border, Tried to Blast Bridge, Says News Agency.

German Vote High In Czechoslovakia

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 22 Czechoslovakia's militant German minority tonight refused again to negotiate with the government over autonomy demands that raised Europe's war fever and brought nearly 500,000 Czech troops to guard the 1,300-mile frontier facing Germany during tense municipal elections.

The Sudeten German Party, supported by Adolf Hitler, issued a communique in the war-fearing Czech capital declining any negotiations "under the existing unconstitutional situation."

It accused the Czech government of throwing troops into the Sudeten German regions "although there was not the slightest evidence any revolt was in preparation there."

Use of troops was called unconstitutional.

[The Deutsches Nachrichten Bureau, semi-official news agency of Berlin, tonight accused Czechoslovak soldiers of crossing the Bohemian border into German territory and attempting to blow up a wooden bridge across the Thaya River near Mistelbach, the United Press reported.

Elections Quiet.

[The purported incident occurred between noon and 2 p. m. Saturday. The agency stated ten Czechoslovak soldiers placed nearly 20 pounds of protyl around the bridge but returned to Czech territory when two German frontier guards approached. The latter were credited with preventing an explosion which would have destroyed the bridge.—Editor's note.]

The new refusal to arbitrate did nothing to allay tension that spread to all Europe's capitals, arousing fear Nazi support of the German minority demands might provoke war.

The elections passed quietly with no repetition of disorders in which two Germans were killed Friday night, but anxious Czechoslovakia particularly watched the frontier of Germany, whose fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, proclaimed himself the protector of all Germans even outside his nation.

Czechs Predict Peace.

Government spokesmen, reiterating the warning Czechoslovakia's boundaries would be defended with an iron determination against all odds, said they saw a relaxation of tension since yesterday.

"This emergency will pass off peacefully," one official said.

The cabinet's political committee discussed the situations of national defense and of the 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans clamoring for autonomy and other concessions.

Later, Premier Milan Hodza received three Sudeten German members of Parliament in the hope of creating a more favorable atmosphere for forthcoming negotiations over the proposed nationalities' statute with which the government will satisfy minority demands.

Big German Vote.

Today's elections were the first of three in which approximately 7,000,000 citizens of this war-created republic will vote for new communal representatives.

Only a few towns with large German populations voted today out of the total of 1,500 communities.

The Sudetens increased their municipal parliament seats from 69 to Langdon, charged with the murder of Beulah Limerick seven years ago, is expected to reach its dramatic climax today when Langdon himself takes the stand. The accused is scheduled to provide new "surprise" testimony when he faces the jury for the first time since the trial started.

Also slated to tell his story to the jury today is Lyman Green, the interne who pronounced the 19-year-old girl dead. Green is now employed by the Procurement Division.

Russell Kelly, chief of defense counsel, said he will renew his motion today for a directed verdict of acquittal.

U. S. Writer Sees Chinese Rout by Air

Flight in Japanese Plane Shows Troops Running From Invaders.

By Elmer W. Peterson.

With the Japanese Armies on the Central China War Front, May 22 (AP).—I witnessed the Chinese-Japanese war from the air today.

It was an unprecedented inspection, made from a Japanese war plane, which unfolded a ghastly picture of men fighting, dying and swarming like ants along dusty roads below.

Flying over an area 25 miles long and 15 miles wide I saw evidence that the Chinese were broken, desperate and bewildered in the face of the onrushing Japanese legions.

At the height of 500 feet over Suchow I saw Japanese troops in full possession of that important railway junction.

The rising sun flag was floating over the city and Japanese soldiers, tanks and trucks were everywhere.

Mission Is Intact.

Sections of the city were blasted into ruins by artillery and air bombardment, but the damage did not appear as great as had been expected.

Circling three times over the railway junction I saw the Southern Presbyterian Mission intact. The stars and stripes painted on the roof of the slate gray building were clearly visible.

From here we flew for two hours through the very center of the battle zone where the Japanese say

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, contends Japan must "remedy the wrong" done in treaty violations against China before the United States would be justified in signing a new nonaggression pact with her.

Holds Pact Unnecessary.

He took this position in an interview when asked for comment on a recent statement by Koki Hirota, the Japanese foreign minister. Hirota had raised the question of this Government's willingness to enter into a nonaggression agreement with Japan.

Pittman said he was satisfied the Foreign Relations Committee would not look with favor on such a treaty, nor would the Senate be willing to ratify it at the present time.

"Our Government does not have to be bound by treaty to prevent it from engaging in acts of aggression against Japan," he said in response to further questions. "Japan's contempt for and violation of treaties would be no assurance to the United States.

Speaks for Self Only.

"Until Japan remedies the wrong done in her violation of the Covenant of the League of Nations and the Nine-Power Treaty in her aggressions against China, no government, in my opinion, is justified in entering into a political treaty with her.

"Our Government holds that Japan has violated and now is violating a treaty of nonaggression with the United States—namely, the Nine-Power Treaty—through her wilful invasion and attempted con-

Plane Tries Attack Again On Cardenas

Federal Craft Drives It Away, But Fails to Capture It.

By the Associated Press.

San Luis Potosi, Mexico, May 22. Federal combat craft today drove off a rebel plane which made a second attempt to bomb the Villa Hermosa residence of President Cardenas.

A fast transport bomber, identified by authorities as one of two planes in possession of the rebel chieftain, Saturnino Cedillo, dropped four bombs near Cardenas' field headquarters yesterday.

The bombs, apparently 25-pounders, dug up the earth along a nearby airfield where Cardenas had stationed an air squadron to help put down the Cedillo rebellion, but did no other damage.

Escapes Pursuit.

Villa Hermosa is 3 miles from San Luis Potosi, the headquarters of Cardenas' campaign. Guards around the villa were increased following yesterday's air attack.

The rebel raider did not get close enough to drop bombs as it did yesterday, and easily outdistanced pursuit planes.

Meanwhile, Mateo Hernandez Netro, governor of San Luis Potosi, disappeared from his state capital leaving a note that designated the chief of the State supreme court as acting governor.

A group of other governors supporting President Cardenas last night told Hernandez Netro he must show quickly what side of the fence he is on. His disappearance followed.

Cedillo Missing.

The defense ministry dispatched the Thirty-sixth Infantry Battalion from the capital early today to back up hard-riding cavalrymen among the 10,000 men Cardenas had concentrated in the provincial stronghold of the free lance strong man.

Actual warfare broke out yesterday when 200 cavalrymen clattered into Rio Verde, 60 miles east-southeast of the provincial capital, San Luis Potosi, and drove out a rebel force.

A government estimate put the number of men under Cedillo's command at 2,000—a marked reduction from the 18,000 to 20,000 credited to the agrarian leader before the outbreak.

3 British Sailors Hurt When Bombs Rain on Valencia

Valencia, Spain, May 22 (U.P.).—Three members of the crew of the British merchant ship Penchames were wounded seriously today when the vessel was bombed in an insurgent air raid on Valencia.

The decks of the British ship were badly damaged by the insurgent bombs.

(Lloyd's shipping register does not list a British ship named Penchames.)

After raiding Valencia and the nearby working-class suburb of El Grau the planes sped up the coast to Sagunto, where heavy damage was reported, but there was no loss of life.

Harbor police last night futilely searched the swirling waters of the Potomac River just below Chain Bridge for the body of Henry Kanczuka, 23-year-old State Department clerk, missing since 5:30 p. m., when a canoe in which he was riding with two companions capsized.

A second canoe, occupied by friends of the missing youth, also overturned in the swift water when the boys noticed the empty canoe of their chums float by and attempted to head the frail craft for shore.

Friends of Kanczuka, Irwin Behn, 20, and Albert Hanse, 25, both clerks employed by the State Department, and riding with him when the canoe upset, told police they saw his body sink several times before disappearing farther downstream. Behn and Hanse both managed to swim ashore.

Edward Fenig, 23, also a clerk at the State Department, and Carl Hanse, civilian employe in the Marine Corps, occupied the second boat, which capsized 200 yards below the point where Kanczuka disappeared. Hanse swam ashore, while Fenig was picked up by a passing motorboat.

According to Fenig, Kanczuka was able to swim but apparently was overcome by strong undercurrents. Several witnesses to the tragedy said they noticed occupants of the first canoe playing about in the small craft just before it capsized.

Mrs. Lillian Mackey, proprietor of a store near the Virginia end of Chain bridge, said members of the boating party visited the store shortly before the accident and remarked that they had been having trouble

Sudetens Again Refuse To Deal With Prague; Nazis Report 'Invasion'

Berlin Is Expected To Heed Warning

By the United Press.

Paris, May 22.—Reassuring messages were exchanged between Paris and Prague today and the French government felt tension was on the wane in the Czechoslovakian crisis.

A foreign office spokesman said the government "considers with satisfaction the situation's improvement but continues a vigilant watch while the Czechs seek to negotiate with the Sudetens, giving them satisfaction on many points."

France reported assurances from London and Moscow that if France is drawn into war with Germany as a consequence of aiding the Czechs against aggression, Britain and Russia will join her. France feels secure behind the Maginot line and there is neither panic nor great anxiety at the prospect of war.

Czechs Say, "We'll Fight."

The French press credits the Franco-British demarches to Berlin with doing more than anything else to prevent direct German action in Czechoslovakia.

Prague messages to the French government today insisted the Czechs would not voluntarily resort to force to settle the minorities dispute, but contained the succinct warning: "We will fight if a single German soldier crosses the border."

Tension Less Acute.

The French foreign office, after tabulating telegrams today from all capitals, said the tension was less acute and professed conviction that Britain's friendly counsels will prevail in the end. A message from President Eduard Benes promised full inquiry into the fatal shooting of two Sudetens by Czech police—specific cause of the crisis—with assurance the killers would be punished if it were found they acted too hastily.

He also said Czechoslovakia did not plan further mobilization unless tension increased. The 80,000 reserves called to the colors yesterday have been stationed at strategic points in Czech border fortifications, he added.

D'Annunzio's Son Held as Runaway Plane Hits Woman

Farmingdale, N. Y., May 22 (U.P.). Hugo D'Annunzio, son of the late Gabriele D'Annunzio, famed Italian poet, was held in $500 bail on a charge of third degree assault after a single motor plane, which he owned, crashed into an automobile near here and injured a woman.

Police said the young Italian flier was standing beside the plane on the flying field when it suddenly swung around in a gust of wind and struck D'Annunzio, knocking him to the ground.

The plane, according to spectators, rolled toward a road adjoining the field, where several autos were parked. The car in which Mrs. Susie H. Jones, 44, of Huntington, N. Y., sat was parked between another automobile and the fence. Mrs. Jones attempted to jump but the plane crashed into the car and she was pinned under the plane. Mrs. Jones was taken to a hospital, where her condition was reported as serious.

5 Identify Urchin As Peter Levine

Dallas, May 22 (AP).—One of two youths who munched sandwiches at a tavern here two nights ago was identified "positively" today as Peter Levine, 12-year-old son of a New Rochelle, N. Y., attorney, who was reported kidnaped three months ago.

Five persons, including Lee Hayes, the tavern proprietor, made the identification.

The youths, hungry and ragged, told Hayes they were without funds. Homer Sealy, former District Attorney's investigator, bought the boys sandwiches. The boy identified as Levine was not talkative.

Europe Watches Czechoslovakia

KAMIL KROFTA, Czechoslovakia's foreign minister, who yesterday explained officially that his nation is calling out new troops to preserve internal order.

The tense situation throughout Europe caused by fear that German support of the Sudeten minority party demands in Czechoslovakia might provoke war was somewhat allayed yesterday. A summary follows:

PRAGUE—The Sudeten German Party refused to negotiate with the government as elections passed quietly.

BERLIN—Czechoslovakian soldiers were accused by a semiofficial German news agency of crossing the Bohemian border.

LONDON—The British cabinet discussed a proposal for dispatch of an "international army" to police Czechoslovakia.

PARIS—France reiterated her pledge to aid Czechoslovakia in case of German aggression.

ROME—Mussolini was reported as urging moderation in dealing with Sudeten-Czech crisis.

By the United Press.

London, May 22.—The British cabinet met in emergency session late today and discussed a proposal, attributed to Germany's initiative, for dispatch of an "international army" to police Czechoslovakia, whose borders are flanked by the troops of four nations on warlike footing.

The suggestion was considered after Viscount Halifax, following day-long communication with Europe's worried chancelleries, conveyed to the cabinet ministers a grave German warning of the explosive possibilities in Czechoslovakia.

London heard that while Czechoslovakia and Germany moved thousands of troops up to the Bohemian frontier for "extraordinary maneuvers," Poland's troops were close to the Slovakian border and Hungary was taking "certain military measures" to the south.

Britain, the cabinet decided, must refrain from taking sides in the Czech-Nazi dispute if its role of peacemaker is to succeed, and new approaches will be made to Berlin and Prague.

The Czechs will be urged to make every effort to avoid incidents while Germany will be asked to induce a more moderate tone toward Czechoslovakia in the Nazi press and to be more patient.

German Vote High In Czechoslovakia

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, May 22 Czechoslovakia's militant German minority tonight refused again to negotiate with the government over autonomy demands that raised Europe's war fever and brought nearly 500,000 Czech troops to guard the 1,300-mile frontier facing Germany during tense municipal elections.

The Sudeten German Party, supported by Adolf Hitler, issued a communique in the war-fearing Czech capital declining any negotiations "under the existing unconstitutional situation."

It accused the Czech government of throwing troops into the Sudeten German regions "although there was not the slightest evidence any revolt was in preparation there."

Use of troops was called unconstitutional.

[The Deutsches Nachrichten Bureau, semi-official news agency of Berlin, tonight accused Czechoslovak soldiers of crossing the Bohemian border into German territory and attempting to blow up a wooden bridge across the Thaya River near Mistelbach, the United Press reported.

Elections Quiet.

[The purported incident occurred between noon and 2 p. m. Saturday. The agency stated ten Czechoslovak soldiers placed nearly 20 pounds of protyl around the bridge but returned to Czech territory when two German frontier guards approached. The latter were credited with preventing an explosion which would have destroyed the bridge.—Editor's note.]

The new refusal to arbitrate did nothing to allay tension that spread to all Europe's capitals, arousing fear Nazi support of the German minority demands might provoke war.

The elections passed quietly with no repetition of disorders in which two Germans were killed Friday night, but anxious Czechoslovakia particularly watched the frontier of Germany, whose fuehrer, Adolf Hitler, proclaimed himself the protector of all Germans even outside his nation.

Czechs Predict Peace.

Government spokesmen, reiterating the warning Czechoslovakia's boundaries would be defended with an iron determination against all odds, said they saw a relaxation of tension since yesterday.

"This emergency will pass off peacefully," one official said.

The cabinet's political committee discussed the situations of national defense and of the 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans clamoring for autonomy and other concessions.

Later, Premier Milan Hodza received three Sudeten German members of Parliament in the hope of creating a more favorable atmosphere for forthcoming negotiations over the proposed nationalities' statute with which the government will satisfy minority demands.

Big German Vote.

Today's elections were the first of three in which approximately 7,000,000 citizens of this war-created republic will vote for new communal representatives.

Only a few towns with large German populations voted today out of the total of 1,500 communities.

Widespread Character of Problems Described in Legislative Survey.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 22.—Relief and social welfare problems have dominated this year's State legislative sessions, thus far, and now are pressing for solution in special meetings of the Illinois and Ohio legislatures.

The widespread character of these problems was described today in a survey of legislative action prepared by the council of State governments.

In Illinois, the Legislature in special session had before it a bill for a $500,000 monthly increase in State aid for relief in Chicago, where 91,000 persons were without relief checks for May due to the depletion of both city and State funds.

Plan Called "Stop-Gap."

Relief officials described the proposal, made by the State administration headed by Gov. Henry Horner, as a "stop-gap." They contended the city needed at least $1,000,000 additional each month.

The bill, which provided that $4,500,000 be taken from the State treasury to supply the $500,000 additional funds for the balance of the year, was expected to be passed next Wednesday.

The State now supplies $3,000,000 a month to Chicago from sales tax receipts, and the Governor has suggested that $3,500,000 monthly should be the limit of the State's aid. Additional funds by taxing each package of cigarets sold in Chicago not more than 3 cents each were asked in a measure offered by State Senator Harold G. Ward, spokesman for Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago.

Ohio Considers Problems.

Ohio's Legislature was considering proposals to permit cities and counties to levy special taxes to finance relief. Earlier in the year the Ohio Legislators approved a $17,500,000 State relief appropriation.

Faced by similar problems, California's Legislature appropriated $5,000,000 to reimburse counties for social security payments and $4,000,000 for unemployment and self-help projects.

Kansas created a $800,000 emergency welfare fund available to counties. Georgia authorized its State welfare department to bear part of the county welfare administration expense. In Mississippi, an appropriation for the blind was provided and provisions for old-age assistance were liberalized.

Virginia Last to Act.

Virginia completed the national record for State participation in the Federal social security program when its Legislature passed laws providing public assistance.

California, Virginia, Missippi and New Jersey passed legislation to enable local government units to establish housing authorities for participation in large-scale public housing projects.

Kentucky was considering possible changes in the administration of its institutions for mental care.

"Although few Legislatures levied new State-wide taxes, most of them voted to continue 'emergency' levies and increased the power of their taxing agencies," the summary of the survey said.

In Other States.

"New York continued its emergency taxes and approved the continuation of sales taxes, and special utility, tobacco and 'luxury' taxes in New York City. Mississippi increased the powers of its tax commission, raised income-tax exemptions to the Federal level, increased income-tax rates ½ of 1 per cent, and passed a 2 per cent use law.

"Georgia abolished its tax commission and placed its taxing authority in the hands of a State revenue commissioner, and New Jersey appointed a committee of 16 to study tax delinquency."

labor movement in the Midwest, hoping for affiliations.

The State chief executive has been in contact with Farm-Labor leaders of Minnesota and Iowa, as well as liberals of other States. He reports an agreement on principles of the new party, but so far there has been no public amalgamation of Midwest liberal groups on methods of procedure and single-party label.

The Governor regards as his closest ally the Farmer-Labor Party, which controls Minnesota. The State committee of that organization has set up a sub-committee of five to give "serious study" to the National Progressive Party.

Retain Old Status.

La Follette lieutenants say the Governor has reached an agreement with Gov. Benson of Minnesota and other Farmer-Laborites of that State that no action should be taken which would jeopardize the liberal movement by an open declaration for the NPA in Minnesota.

This agreement, La Follette advisers said, clears the way for the Minnesota party to retain its Farmer-Labor status in the approaching elections, and act upon the new national party later.

However, the Minnesota F.-L. State committee has adopted a resolution opposing fascism, communism and exponents of the "antiquated monopolistic system," which is in line with the principles of the National Progressives.

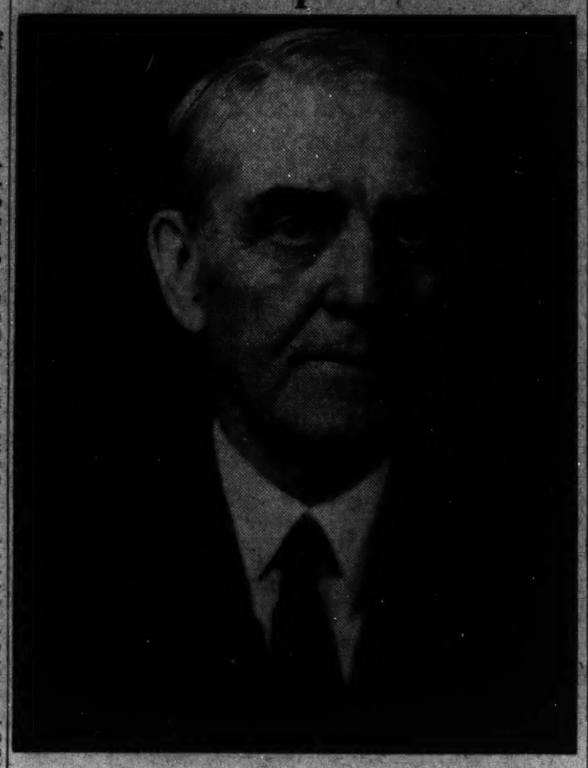
See Little Opposition.

The Wisconsin F.-L.-P. entity in the Progressive Party, but not the whole part of it, voted down at its morning session a proposal to rescind its constitutional provision that only a member could be indorsed, but authorized its executive board, in effect, to deal with the situation in case La Follette seeks a fourth term.

Any federation candidate who withdraws—which is believed certain to be the case should La Follette run for re-election—may be replaced by the executive board if it chooses.

Working for Washington

Capper Sure Residents of States Want D.C. People to Have Vote



Harris & Ewing.

SENATOR ARTHUR CAPPER.

Americans' Natural Impulse Is to Believe in Suffrage, Says Senator Who Has Almost a Vested Interest in Kansas Ballots.

By Christine Sadler

If citizens "out in the States" ever get a chance to vote on whether District of Columbia residents should have representation in Congress and the right to vote for President, they will approve such a plan by an overwhelming majority. This is the opinion of Senator Arthur Capper, who was put on the District committee when he first arrived here in 1918 and has been there ever since.

"Many of them will be surprised that Washingtonians are not voting already. It is the natural impulse of the American people to believe in suffrage. I came here believing in a vote for the District and after eight years as chairman of the Senate District Committee, I believe in it more than ever," he declares.

Senator Capper does not believe that Congressmen—even those appointed to the District committees and trying to do all they can—can possibly be as interested in local affairs as they are in the least happenings back home. Although he has remained here 20 years and given liberally of his time to District affairs, for instance, Senator Capper's chief interests have remained in Kansas. The Kansans are "his people" and he's hankering to get back there to see them right now.

Wants to Go Home.

"Six months here, and I want to get home. I'll admit, on the other hand, though, that after five or six months in Kansas I am homesick to get back to the Capital," he says.

For several years Senator Capper has disapproved of the division of the cost of District government between the Federal Government and local residents. He thinks the Government's annual $5,000,000 contribution is too small and does not "believe Congress has been fair in that arrangement."

Senator Capper says he has found that the people of the District "do not object to the expenditure of their public funds for anything and everything that is needed." He believes that if they had a member of Congress on the job and responsible to them, they could get better results in their efforts for better hospitals and schools. "Gallinger Hospital conditions that are a disgrace to the National Capital have been permitted to exist, but not because of anything residents could do," he declares.

Congressmen Burdened.

"Congressmen do not intentionally neglect or slight District affairs, but they generally carry a great burden already. I think Congress welcomes complaints from the District residents and that the committees are inclined to hear all sides of the questoin. But legislation often drags out unnecessarily, and appropriations are blocked. A member close at hand watching could avoid much delay for the District.

"I don't think the District residents express themselves as forcefully as they should, but perhaps are inclined to think their work just so much lost effort. I think the people should be encouraged to take a real interest in their affairs. The recent election I consider to be a manifestation of their ability to express themselves clearly when they are sufficiently interested," he asserts.

The Kansan has been introducing and reintroducing a resolution asking Congress to give national representation to the District ever since the death six years ago of Senator Jones, of Washington, who was the leader until that date. He will continue to do so throughout his years in Congress, and he has two more years to go on his present term.

Republican and Still Here.

Capper was one of five Republicans who was elected to the Senate in the last elections. His State votes for him, regardless. "It was a great disappointment to me that the Republicans did not carry Kansas for Landon," he asserts.

But Senator Capper's hold on the Kansans is more than a political one. Two hundred and fifteen Kansas babies are named for him. He has lent a fourth of a million dollars to Kansas farm boys and girls who wished to buy seed corn, pigs, chickens and the like. For 29 years he has celebrated his birthday, on June 14, by a party at Topeka for all the boys and girls in Kansas. Capper's Weekly, only one of his publications,is accepted as part of the farmers' Bible. Added to all that, he loves a campaign. Nothing pleases him better than making speeches and meeting and greeting people. The sky would not look the same to Kansans if Arthur Capper were not representing them in Washington.

On Wednesday—Representative Ross A. Collins, of Mississippi, chairman of the sub-committee on District Appropriations, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Colorado Justice, Roosevelt Friend, To Oppose Adams

By the Associated Press.

The Capital heard with keen interest yesterday that Justice Benjamin C. Hilliard, who conferred with President Roosevelt recently, had entered the race for the Democratic Senatorial nominatoin in Colorado against Senator Alva B. Adams.

Adams said he would issue a general statement later regarding his campaign.

At Denver, Justice Hilliard, member of the Colorado Supreme Court, said the Senator had failed to support the Roosevelt Administration. The justice added he intended to run on a "strictly New Deal platform."

Adams has said he opposed President Roosevelt's proposals only when he thought them detrimental to the interests of Colorado or when he deemed them unconstitutional.

Since 1934, he has piloted the Administration's big relief bills through the Senate and now is in charge of the $3,247,000,000 spending-lending measure.

On the President's court reorganization bill he expressed no opinion publicly. He opposed the Administration's Government reorganization measure.

$212,000,000 Sought by AAA To Cut Crops

37 Pct. Wheat Reduction Is Expected for 1939; Move Up to Congress.

By the Associated Press.

AAA officials indicated yesterday that if Congress approved the $212,000,000 farm benefit fund which the Senate Appropriations Committee has added to the relief bill, the money would be used to induce growers' compliance with the Government's 1939 crop programs.

Persons familiar with problems faced by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration said the money would be useful especially in connection with next year's wheat program. That program is expected to call for a drastic reduction in wheat plantings if present prospects for the 1938 crop materialize.

No Quota This Year.

[Secretary Henry Wallace announced on Friday that since no parity payment funds had been made available by May 15, no wheat marketing quotas on this year's crop will be possible.

He pointed out that the 1938 farm act sets May 15 as the latest date for establishing a national wheat marketing quota, subject to a referendum by the growers, and provides that no wheat quotas can be in effect for the marketing year beginning July 1 unless provision for parity payments on this year's crop have been made prior to that date.—Editor's note.]

Undoubtedly, officials said, the proposed fund would be distributed only among wheat, corn and cotton growers who kept within the planting quotas assigned them for next year.

Plan Big Reduction.

Such a policy already governs the distribution of $130,000,000 which Congress voted last year for cotton growers. Although made available for growers of 1937 cotton, payments from this fund will be made this summer only to farmers who planted within 1938 cotton acreage allotments assigned under the new crop control law.

AAA officials have expressed belief that other funds now available under the $500,000,000 soil conservation subsidy program would be insufficient to "compensate" wheat growers adequately for participation in the prospective acreage reduction for 1939.

The 1939 wheat program, to be announced in July, is expected to propose that plantings be reduced from the 80,000,000 acres seeded for this year's crop to 50,000,000 acres or less. Thus, individual farmers would be asked to reduce their operatons 37 per cent, or possibly more.

Cotton Surplus Seen.

Cotton growers who reduced their plantings about 20 per cent this season probably will be asked to do the same thing next year. A cotton surplus now estimated at 13,000,000 bales—sufficient to supply normal domestic and export needs a full year—will require acreage reduction again next year, officials said.

Growers in the Midwestern commercial corn belt, who this year were asked to reduce their operations about 18 per cent, also may be requested to repeat the program next year, depending on the size of this year's crop.

Chevalier Farley Comes to Defense Of Postmistresses

The old gallant, Postmaster General James Aloysius Farley, came to the defense of women in the Postal Service yesterday.

Women are in charge of some of the largest postoffices in the country, Farley declared, in response to numerous inquiries.

Women appointees, Farley said, are performing valuable service, both to the department and to their own communities.

Of the 30,469 Presidential and fourth-class postmasters appointed and commissioned between March 4, 1933, and May 12, 1938, 27 per cent, or 8,229 have been women, the Postmaster General announced. Of these, 3,360 women have received posts in first, second and third class offices.

program by prohibiting use of PWA funds for building municipal light and power systems and slashing $75,000,000 from the amount authorized for rural electrification.

"I understand the proposed PWA amendment was offered by Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine. I am not surprised at his offering it, but I am shocked at its acceptance by the committee. The slash in rural electrification funds seems to have been the result of a misunderstanding. Someone circulated the report that REA Administrator John L. Carmody said that the REA did not need the amount authorized.

"Mr. Carmody made no such statement. What he was trying to make the committee understand was that he needed additional funds for administrative expenses to enable REA to properly handle this additional amount. Instead of giving the REA sufficient funds to carry on the work, the committee just penalized the farmers of the country by reducing the amount authorized for REA loans, in the face of the fact that farmers in every State are begging for these loans and in face of the further fact that every dollar of these funds will be paid back with interest.

"Well, they may get by with these amendments, but they will know they have been in a fight when it is over."

In the Senate, opposition to the PWA power restriction culminated in an announcement by Senator McKeller (Democrat), of Tennessee, that he would move to have the limitation stricken from the bill, and he was supported, in comments to the Associated Press, by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska; Senator Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, and others.

Others Support Move.

Indications that the committee action would be supported, on the other hand, were given by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, who said he approved "most heartily," and Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, who declared:

"I like it. I have taken the position all the time that the Government ought not to compete with private enterprise."

Insertion of the provision followed a plea before the sub-committee by Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, who said cessation of public competition with the private utilities would enable the latter to expand their properties and provide more employment.

Other committee changes in the House bill may cause time-consuming wrangling.

Wage Fight Expected.

The amendment to make WPA wages uniform throughout the country, sponsored by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, is certain to cause a controversy, in view of the simultaneous House struggle over the wage-hour bill which provides the same standards in all sections of the country.

Reduction from $100,000,000 to $25,000,000 of the recovery funds for rural electrification, and a cut of $100,000,000 from PWA fund, likewise promise difficulties for the committee bill.

The House wage-hour bill, designed to attain a 40-cent-an-hour pay scale in three years and a 40-hour week in two years by gradual changes, starting at 25 cents an hour and 44 hours a week, has some fiery Southern opposition in the larger chamber. Efforts will be made to provide wage differentials in favor of Southern industries, but little hope of House success is held by proponents of such changes. They are looking to the Senate to reject the universal wage plan.

To Urge Substitute.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, and Dies (Democrat), of Texas, without optimism, will urge a substitute measure providing payment of not more than 5 cents an hour above the average salaries in individual industries, the rate increasing gradually until it reaches 40 cents an hour. The work week would start at 48 hours and descend to 40.

On the other hand, Representative Connery (Democrat), of Massachusetts, will seek to make the work week 40 hours and the pay scale 40 cents at once.

Passage of the wage-hour measure by tomorrow night was forecast by leaders, but such quick action by the Senate on the spending bill was not anticipated. Considerable more time likely will be consumed by the latter chamber, also, when the wage-hour bill reaches it.

The House still must act on the deficiency bill, which may not be reported out of committee for a week or ten days.

Cooke to Speak At American U.

Morris Cooke, consulting engineer in management and former head of the Rural Electrification Administration, will be speaker at American University commencement exercises at Memorial Continental Hall, June 6, Dr. Joseph M. Gray, chancellor, announced yesterday.

Former president of the Taylor Society and a former member of the Council of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Cooke served at one time as director of public works for Philadelphia. Public Education Topic of Thomas

Loss to labor of public subsidized education, unless it arouses itself to a voice and place in its direction and operation, with the theme of an address by Charles M. Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, last night at Odd Fellows Hall before Lodge 466, organized Government workers.

"Liberty cannot be kept without culture," he said. "Since organized labor rescued public schools for the masses a century ago, private institutions have grown apace, perpetuating class customs. Labor's gains in social security and collective bargaining can be maintained only by educating its gifted youth for a more alert intellectuality in labor's employ, and in the invention and use of improved devices for making a living and a life."

"I KNOW TOBACCO... I GROW IT!"

Mr. James Graves sells the pick of his crop to Camel

HOW DO I KNOW MY CIGARETTE CONTAINS THE FINEST TOBACCO? BECAUSE I SMOKE CAMELS. CAMEL BOUGHT THE PICK OF MY LAST CROP AND PAID A SIGHT MORE THAN FOR ORDINARY GRADES. MOST GROWERS 'ROUND HERE SOLD THEIR BEST LOTS TO CAMELS TOO. NO WONDER CAMEL IS THE MOST POPULAR CIGARETTE IN THESE PARTS!

MEN who grow fine tobaccos—who sell them—who get the checks—they know the quality of tobacco that goes into various cigarettes. And they say, "Camels buy our finest grades." So, if you want to enjoy a cigarette made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—it's just plain logic to choose Camels.

'Flying Cadets' Arrive Here in War on Crime

42 Chicago Boys to Ask Roosevelt Aid Drive on Juvenile Delinquency.

Forty-two boys, ranging from 10 to 18 years of age and dressed in the trim slate-blue uniforms of the Morgan Park Military Academy in Chicago, arrived at Washington Airport yesterday to discuss crime prevention here with President Roosevelt and Attorney General Homer S. Cummings.

Pouring out of two giant American Airlines planes, the students expressed enthusiasm over the first leg of their 3,000-mile air tour of the East. Purpose of the flight is to promote the Junior Crime Prevention League, organized two months ago by the school's graduating class.

Today the group will call on the President to ask him to proclaim a National Crime Prevention Week. As explained yesterday by school officials, the week-long campaign would be directed principally at the youth of the Nation, which the boys feel is more than ever susceptible to criminal tendencies because of the poverty and unemployment created by the depression.

The boys stopped off in Indianapolis, where a branch of the league already has been formed. In Pittsburgh they landed again to take aboard John H. Norcutt, high school student who won an essay contest sponsored by the league. The next stop on their three-day itinerary is New York City, where they will be guests of Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia and will salute the Statue of Liberty—their own idea.

They also will visit Gettysburg and Annapolis and Crime Prevention League chapters in Buffalo and Detroit. The "flying cadets'" expedition is headed by Maj. Edward Bouma, commandant of the school, which is affiliated with the University of Chicago.

Honorary head is Dwight H. Green, Chicago lawyer, who as district attorney of Chicago was largely responsible for sending Al Capone to Alcatraz. The boys issued an invitation to him to show their admiration for his anticrime activities.

Borah Suggests U. S. Tax Only Its Own Bonds

By the Associated Press.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, advocated yesterday a system whereby the Federal Government would levy upon income from its own bonds and the States on income from their own securities.

Borah said this would be a "simple solution" of the problem of tax-exempt securities.

President Roosevelt has suggested legislation to permit the State and Federal governments to tax income from each other's securities as well as from their own.

Contending that a constitutional amendment would be necessary to carry out such a policy, Borah said single taxation of securities would supply needed revenue and close a loophole through which the funds of many investors escaped taxation.

He Opposes Delay.

Borah said valid objections had been raised to the proposal that the Federal Government tax income from State securities. He reported he had received numerous complaints that the States, in effect, would be forced to pay this Federal tax through increased interest on their bonds.

This situation was not presented as forcefully in connection with Federal securities, he said, because many investors in such bonds were interested primarily in the security they afforded rather than the interest they bring.

The Senator said he opposed delay in Congressional consideration of the tax-exempt security problem, which he said would be occasioned by an investigation suggested by Senator Brown (Democrat), Michigan.

Brown Wants Study.

Brown has proposed that a joint Congressional committee of 12 make a study and report to Congress next February 1.

Borah said he thought this was unnecessary, that legislation could be drafted without such an inquiry. He added, however, that he despaired of obtaining any action at this session of Congress.

The Supreme Court may rule today on a request by 25 States for protection against "Federal usurpation" and the "burden of Federal taxation."

At issue is the right of the Federal Government to impose an income tax on the salaries of officials of the Port of New York Authority, which was created by New York and New Jersey to operate bridges and tunnels.

Ask Ruling Upheld.

The 25 States asked the justices to sustain a decision by the Federal Circuit Court at New York that the authority functioned as an agency of the United States and hence was immune from Federal taxation.

Attorneys for the port authority officials contended the Federal Government was attempting to enlarge the field of taxation and that the income from the port authority itself would be the next objective.

Spending Bill Scored, Lauded In Radio Debate

Capper Urges Chance for Business; Benefits Cited by Wagner.

Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, attacking the President's "pump-priming" recovery program, last night declared that "business spending, not Government spending, is the road to re-employment."

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, retorted, in a radio debate with the Kansan over the Mutual system:

"The program . . . carries forward the progressive economic and social ideals developed during the past five years. It represents policies tested by experience, and found wholly necessary to the assurance of business recovery and the satisfaction of human rights."

A statement signed by 56 members of the Economists National Committee on Monetary Policy expressed the view that pump-priming was unsound public policy.

"We do not believe that such a program offers a promise of reaching the roots of our economic difficulty, or of stimulating a sound or sustained business recovery," the statement said.

Among signers of the statement were:

Charles C. Arbuthnut, Western Reserve University; Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland Trust Co.; George E. Barnett, Johns Hopkins University; Herbert M. Bratter, Washington; John M. Chapman, Columbia University; Charles W. Fackler, New York University; Hudson B. Hastings, Yale University; Edwin W. Kemmerer, Princeton University; Joseph A. Schumpeter, Harvard University, and Max Winkler, College of the City of New York.

Senator Capper proposed that instead of pump-priming, the Administration should "in good faith and whole-heartedly co-operate with business," and should draw a line beyond which Government will not compete with private business. He said the objective in taxation must be changed from punitive taxes to the obtaining of revenues through a system that will encourage rather than discourage business. He called for elimination of tax-exempt securities, and urged amending the national labor relations act "to promote co-operation between employer and employe.

"Once these steps are taken," he said, "a pent-up flood of private capital will be loosened by industry which will make Roosevelt's $6,000,000,000 pump-priming program look like small change."

Senator Wagner attacked the proposal to turn the relief administration back to the States. He said that in 1932 and 1933 "because we forgot the lines on the map and answered the overwhelming logic of the human appeal, we were able to preserve the American Nation."

He said that to "transform a great national duty into the separate responsibility of 48 States . . . would return us to the devastating combination of do-nothingism' on the one hand, and the breadline, the soup kitchen and the dole on the other."

He added:

"Let us remember that it is the way of folly to cut down public activity faster than private industry can assume the load. We cannot say to fair-minded and intelligent business that we will no longer create purchasing power and a market for goods through a wise use of public credit. We cannot say to millions of men and women that they shall have neither a job in private industry nor the help of their Government in earning their livelihood in a self-respecting way."

Virginia Captain Shoots Wife To Death in Pity, Kills Self

Suicide

He then evidently turned the weapon on himself and fell dead beside her bed.

Professor Finds Bodies.

The couple had been married only three years, most of which was filled with suffering.

Six months after their marriage in Charleston, W. Va., Capt. and Mrs. Stringfellow were involved in an automobile accident. A wasp flew into the car as they were driving near West Point, Va., and stung Mrs. Stringfellow. When her husband tried to brush the insect away he lost control of the automobile, which catapulted off the road. He soon recovered but his wife's back was broken. Physicians held no hope for her recovery.

Capt. Stringfellow resigned from the Huntington, (W. Va.) Gas & Development Co., moved here and devoted all his time to nursing his wife. Mrs. Stringfellow's condition had been critical for the last few weeks.

Three Notes Found.

The tragedy was discovered by Assistant Prof. Stanislaw John Makielski of the University of Virginia's school of art and architecture. Capt. Stringfellow telephoned him at 7:15 a. m. today, according to Makielski, and asked him to come to their apartment in the fashionable Maple street section to get some dishes which belonged to the professor.

An hour later Makielski found the couple, surrounded by the caged canaries and chattering squirrels the husband had purchased to cheer up his wife. Capt. Stringfellow lay face down, clutching a towel, a bullet hole above his left ear. A .38-caliber Colt revolver was found beneath his pajama-clad body.

Coroner K. de Forest Burch, announcing, that he would withhold a formal verdict until tomorrow, referred to the double slaying as "mercy deaths."

Three notes were found on a table in the room. Two addressed to Capt. Stringfellow's brother, Capt. Martin Stringfellow, U. S. A., retired, of nearby Rio, left instructions as to who should be notified "in case anything should happen," and requested burial in Arlington National Cemetery. The third contained a check for the colored maid.

Capt. Stringfellow was an uncle of Stringfellow Barr, president of St. John's College, Annapolis. His father was the Rev. Frank Stringfellow, Episcopal rector and for many years chaplain of the Episcopal High School in Alexandria.

Both were natives of Huntington, where Mrs. Stringfellow's parents still live. The former Miss Grace Root leaves a sister, Mrs. Donna Root Phillips, of Huntington.

Capt. Stringfellow was graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and served during the World War as captain of Artillery, 230th Infantry. He recently published a volume of war reminiscences entiled "Hell! No."

He leaves his brother and three sisters, Mrs. Ida Barr, wife of Dr. William Alexander Barr, Episcopal clergyman, who lives near Charlottesville; Mrs. Alice Lee Shultice, wife of R. W. Shultice, prominent Norfolk attorney, and Mrs. Janie Stuart Patton, wife of Dr. R. W. Patton, of Lindsay.

The Stringfellows will be buried at 4 p. m. tomorrow in Riverview Cemetery. The double service will be conducted by Dr. R. W. Patton.

Disband Union, Labor Board Orders Swift

Calls Election in Denver Plant of Packing Co.; Charges Favoritism.

Swift & Co., packers, yesterday was ordered by the National Labor Relations Board to "cease engaging in unfair labor practices" and to disband "company-dominated" labor organizations at its plants in Evansville, Ind., and Denver, Colo.

At the same time the board ordered an election within 15 days to determine whether employes at the Evansville plant desire to be represented by the United Packing House Workers Local Industrial Union No. 328, affiliated with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Canvassing Charged.

Charges that the company discharged four employes at Evansville because they had joined or assisted the C. I. O. union were dismissed.

The board criticized officials of the company for favoritism it said was shown to effeorts to build up the "inside" union at the Denver plant, while similar privileges were denied the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The board charged that one foreman systematically canvassed employes in an effort to have them join the "company union," and several employes testified he had threatened them with loss of vacation, bonus and seniority rights unless they joined.

Favoritism Seen.

Supervisory officials permitted widespread organizing for the favored group to be carried on during working hours without reprimand, the board held, but "charges that the Amalgamated was attempting to secure members during working hours were the object of prompt attention by the company."

The board made it clear that the procedure followed in reaching its decision complied with requirements laid down by the Supreme Court in the Kansas City stockyards' decision last month.

Announcement of its decision said:

"Public hearings on the two cases were held, followed in each case by service of an intermediate report upon the parties to which exceptions were taken by the company, and by oral argument before the board in Washington. The privilege of filing briefs was also extended."

Reports Necessary.

Because in several cases, notably those against the Ford Motor Co. and the Republic Steel Corporation, the board did not submit such intermediate reports to the companies with an opportunity for rebuttal, the board recently has endeavored to withdraw such cases from circuit courts of appeal.

The Supreme Court held that absence of such a report and rebuttal opportunity in the stockyards case was a "vital defect."

'Public General Relief' Cases Declined 7% Here in April

$64,260 Obligations Incurred With 2,464 Cases, Social Security Board Reports in Comparison With March Figures.

A decline of 7 per cent in "public general relief" cases in the District last month was revealed yesterday as the Social Security Board published figures showing an average drop of 6 per cent in cities throughout the United States.

The actual number of public general relief cases in Washington was given as 2,464.

Falls to $64,260.

Obligations incurred for relief extended to cases in the District fell 6 per cent from the March figures to $64,260, compared with an average 10 per cent decline in 101 urban areas. For the selected 101 cities, totals were 773,242 cases, for which obligations amounting to $21,312,772 were incurred.

Decreases in the number of cases were reported for more than three-fourths of the 101 cities, while increases of as much as 1 per cent were given for 16 cities.

Eighty-seven of the urban areas announced decreases of 1 per cent or more in the amount of obligations incurred for public general relief, while increases ranging from 1 to 17 per cent were reported for 11 cities.

"General Relief" Defined.

The board defined "public general relief" as "all State and local relief in cash and in kind extended to the needy, except public assistance to the needy aged, needy blind and dependent children under the social security act, other public assistance of these special types and aid to veterans under State and local statutes.

"It does not include expenditures from public funds for maternal and child health and welfare services, costs of hospitalization, burials, institutional or boarding-home care of children and adults, earnings under the works program, loans and subsistence grants made by the Farm Security Administration or Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation. Nor does it include aid granted by private relief and welfare agencies."

Carlsbad, Czechoslovakia, May 22. I completed here late today a tour of more than 100 miles along the German strip in northwest Czechoslovakia. I saw no incidents and no heated debate, but the looks which loitering crowds exchanged with soldiers at polls, bridges and street intersections were sufficient evidence of emotions which may flare up at any moment to threaten Europe with war.

I have been in the Rhineland and other minority districts in race-torn Europe but I never have seen anything approaching the contempt of the Sudetens for their Czech governors or the constant hatred of the Czechs for the Germans. The vast majority of more than 3,500,000 Sudetens believe fervently Czechoslovakians will lose their homeland within a few weeks or months.

Sudetens Show Contempt.

Today they stood in small groups around army patrols which halted and searched passersby. Many wore white golf stockings, forbidden emblem of the Nazi party of Konrad Henlein. Many gave the Hitler salute, with amused glances at the fuming soldiers.

If Germany masses troops across the frontier Czechoslovakia's preparations might be more elaborate but certainly her watchfulness could not be greater. It appears the Prague government must fear that Henlein plans a march on the capital in second-hand automobiles and farm wagons.

From Berlin it took me exactly 12 hours and 30 minutes to make a trip ordinarily taking six hours. All except four hours of this time I spent either trying to cross the border or to find some road within Czechoslovakia which was not blocked.

Trenches Already Dug.

At one point I saw a convoy of four huge camouflaged army trucks, one with a huge anti-aircraft searchlight. Groups of Czech soldiers were at crossroads and bridgeheads.

Czechoslovakia in the 19 years of her existence has converted this mountainous frontier district—her natural geographic and military if not racial border—into one of the most fortified areas in Europe. Weather-worn concrete "pill boxes" for machine guns dot the rolling fields of buckwheat, rye and mustard. Usually vacant, there were soldiers on duty there today.

Trenches already are dug on the sides of the wooded hills. Other fortifications reportedly are concealed.

The German license plate on my car was most unpopular — with Czech authorities. In Teppitz, a crowd of Sudetens surrounded my car and asked me to stop a broadcast coming in on the car's radio and tune in Berlin news. Two Czech police came up, looked at the German license plate and angrily demanded that I move on in order not to form a focus point for a crowd.

Czechs Salute U. S. Flag.

I put a small American flag on the radiator cap, which got me past many blockades. The flag invariably brought a grin to the face of any Czech because Woodrow Wilson had a leading role in the resurrection of the nation and many of the towns and cities have avenues named for him. I saw no street named Wilson in towns predominantly Sudeten.

The flag had a different effect on the Sudetens.

With a glance at my Berlin license plates, they usually saluted and seemed to conclude that I was a clever Berlin Nazi, thus disguising my identity. Every car on the road, Czech or otherwise, was stopped and searched.

I noticed an air of confident excitement among all the Sudetens and their contempt for the helmeted Czech policemen and soldiers. As one Sudeten remarked: "They may be tough now that it's their last chance." They have faith that Adolf Hitler eventually will find a way to make them "greater Germans."

British Discuss Nazis' Plan to 'Police' Czechs

long session of an assurance from Fuehrer Hitler to the effect Germany will create no "incident" over minor troubles in Czechoslovakia, supposedly meaning clashes between Czechs and members of the German minority.

The assurance was coupled with a warning, however, that any large-scale bloodshed in the Sudeten German areas of the country will be "a different matter."

The cabinet took the position, after hearing the foreign secretary's reports from Berlin, Prague, Paris and other alarmed capitals, that the situation was "much better" than it was 24 hours ago.

The suggestion for an "international army" contemplated a form of neutral control during the Czechoslovak elections, which will continue until early June, similar to that established in the Saar Basin for the Nazi plebiscite there three years ago.

An international police force of 3,300 troops, including 1,500 British, 1,500 Italians and units of Dutch and Swedish regiments maintained order in the Saar while the 826,000 residents of the war-lost German mining region voted overwhelmingly on January 13, 1935, to return to the Third Reich.

Chamberlain, whose "realistic" policy of direct dealings with the totalitarian powers is at stake in Europe's latest crisis, hurried back to London shortly before noon from Chequers and went immediately into conference with Halifax, whose desk was piled with diplomatic reports.

A few minutes previously, Halifax had conferred with the German Ambassador, Herbert von Dirksen, who delivered to him Germany's assurance that she will refrain from force in retaliation for the killing of two Sudeten German farmers.

Halifax also talked with the French Ambassador, Charles Andre Corbin, who informed Britain that if German troops cross the Czechoslovak frontier "that will immediately set off war" and France will move her troops to the aid of the Prague government.

Key ministers conferred with Halifax throughout the day, before the extraordinary cabinet session was summoned at 5 p. m.

Poles Refuse Explanation.

Warsaw, Poland, May 22 (U.P.).—Poland tonight was understood to have declined to give a precise statement of its attitude toward the German-Czechoslovak crisis when British Ambassador Sir Howard W. Kennard visited the foreign office.

The ambassador visited the foreign office after reports appeared in the British press that Poland was moving troops to the Polish-Czech frontier and might march into Czechoslovakia from the north if Germany invaded from the west.

105 in the four cities while the Communists dropped from 14 to 5 and the United German Democratic Party—non-Nazi—dropped from 28 to 18.

Rightists Lose.

It polled 142,000 votes as compared with 107,000 in 1931, and emerged the strongest party.

Communists were next with 89,000 votes. Extreme Rightist parties lost heavily.

In next Sunday's balloting and on June 12 an aggregate of 8,500 additional communities will vote.

The appearance of any sort of a plebiscite thus will be avoided and Konrad Henlein, the stocky leader of the nation's Sudeten German minority, will not be able to announce any complete figures on the numerical strength of his followers until mid-June.

Ballot Compulsory.

Voting is compulsory—with non-voters subject to fines—for men and women over 21. The aged and ill are among the outstanding citizens exempted.

Seventy thousand men—one class of reserves and secondary reserves—were called to the colors yesterday and the frontier strengthened after two Sudeten Germans were killed by border guards.

These reserves, together with an undisclosed number of technical troops and the army of 190,000 soldiers, gave the nation an estimated total of nearly half a million men under arms.

By the United Press.

Berlin, May 22.—The semiofficial German news agency tonight accused Czechoslovak soldiers of crossing the Bohemian border into German territory and attempting to blow up a wooden bridge across the Thaya River near Mistelbach.

The accusation was made by the news agency, Deutsches Nachrichten Bureau, on the basis of reports from the Nazi gendarmerie at Mistelbach.

The purported incident occurred between noon and 2 p. m. Saturday, only a few hours after the killing of two Sudeten Germans by Czech gendarmes near Eger, on the western German-Czech border.

"Ten Soldiers" Crossed.

The D. N. B. quoted the Mistelbach gendarmerie post as saying that ten Czech soldiers entered German territory from Bernharstal, on the Czech side of the frontier and attempted to blow up the wooden bridge.

According to the statement, the Czech soldiers placed nearly 20 pounds of protyl around the bridge. When two German frontier guards approached, the Czechs returned to Czech territory and an explosion was prevented, the D. N. B. said.

The British Ambassador, Sir Neville Hnederson, visited the foreign office today and made his third representation in 47 hours to stress Britain's desire for a peaceful settlement of the Czech-Nazi crisis.

Although it was evident that the Wilhelmstrasse regarded the troubles across the Czech frontier and the movement of troops on both sides of the border as containing grave possibilities, no official statements were made.

Vienna, May 22 (AP).—Reports of a concentration of Czechoslovak machine-gun units, army radio stations and field kitchens 2 miles behind the border opposite Znaim, Austrian Germany, were brought to Vienna today by American motorists.

The Americans said they also saw small, camouflaged field pieces pointed toward the border from wine cellars in hillside vineyards.

The Americans, who told of seeing these things early this morning, added they noticed no extraordinary precautions on this side of the border.

Reds Study News Silently.

Moscow, May 22 (AP).—Soviet Russian authorities today gave attentive regard to war-threatening developments between Germany and Czechoslovakia, a mutual assistance ally of Russia.

The press, which had been accusing Britain and France of opening the way for a German attack on Czechoslovakia, reflected the official caution, refraining from comment.

The foreign office apparently rested on Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff's declaration of March 17 the Soviet Union would abide by its mutual assistance pact with Czechoslovakia.

The treaty provides for Soviet aid if France, bound also to help Czechoslovakia, moves to protect the central European democracy from aggression.

Duce Counsels Moderation.

Rome, May 22 (U.P.).—Informed Fascists said tonight Premier Mussolini is urging Reichsfuehrer Hitler to use moderation in dealing with the Sudeten-Czech crisis.

Fascists, familiar with Il Duce's foreign policy, believed that within 48 hours Hitler will decide whether or not circumstances permit a continuation of Europe's shaky peace structure.

Mussolini and his foreign minister and son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, remained in Rome over Sunday and received reports from other European capitals.

Italy was said to be urging Hitler to seek a peaceful solution of his troubles with the Prague government, realizing the alliance of the two dictators would force Italy to stand fast at Germany's side if events in Central Europe should threaten war.

No Sympathy for Czechs.

On Hitler's visit to Rome early this month Mussolini was said to have given his guest a promise of "sympathetic co-operation" toward Nazi ambitions in Czechoslovakia, but no pledge of military aid.

The Italian press, pointing out Czechoslovakia "always has been hostile toward Italy," carried detailed accounts of alleged Bohemian terrorist acts against the Sudeten German minority, stressing the German version of the incident involving the killing of two Sudeten farmers near Eger early Saturday.

The British Ambassador, Lord Perth, canceled a scheduled vacation in northern Italy—he was to have departed tonight—under instructions from London.

Ribbentrop, Hitler Confer.

denas' secretary of agriculture, was unknown.

Dispatches from Matamoras, across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, Tex., said Cedillo was expected there tomorrow, en route to the United States.

The Associated Press correspondent at San Luis Potosi, however, quoted a "source whose veracity is beyond all doubt" as saying the rebel leader planned to move to the north and attempt a contact with Nicolas Rodriguez, leader of the semi-Fascist Goldshirts.

Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Ambassador to Washington, took a train last night from San Luis Potosi for a conference with Cardenas before flying on to the United States.

Gen. Genovevo Rivas Guillen, commander of the regular garrison in San Luis Potosi state, issued a proclamation which he said was designed to put at rest "unfounded versions spread for the sole purpose of disorientation."

"The rebellion of the former Gen. Cedillo obeys a plan duly prepared for some time, with the aim of overthrowing a system of government that did not fit the interests nor the convictions of all the enemies of the revolution . . .

"This proposal . . . was well known in all social sectors, but in spite of it and of the outstanding proofs seized by authorities, the first magistrate of the nation (Cardenas) . . . did not wish to proceed against him (Cedillo), hoping that finally he would be convinced of his mistake and of his own accord avoid following the way of treason and dishonor.

"The cause upheld by the chief (Cedillo) is unpatriotic and illegal and, consequently, lost . . . I cordially invite all enlisted in the rebel sector to cease in their attitude, sure that military and civil authorities will give them all the facilities and guarantees necessary to return to the honest and simple life of simple tillers of the soil."

quest of China. Why enter any other nonaggression treaties with Japan? I do not believe in entering into political treaties with wilful violators of such treaties."

Pittman made it plain he was not speaking for the State Department, which has been silent regarding the Hirota overture.

He predicted this country would not recognize the Japanese-dominated governments set up in China.

"Our Government has not recognized the conquest of Manchuria," he pointed out. "Nor will it, in my opinion, recognize the conquest of any other part of China until the Chinese government recognizes by treaty such a conquest.

"As far as I am personally concerned," the Nevada Senator continued, "if the Chinese government is driven back to a cave in the mountains 3,000 miles from the coast and the government consists only of Chiang Kai-shek (China's generalissimo), I would continue to recognize that government as the government of all China.

"It will be a long time, in my opinion, if ever, when the Chinese government will be driven back so far and will be reduced to so small a staff."

Prospects are increasing for a stalemate in the conflict between China and Japan, said a report made public yesterday by the Foreign Policy Association.

David H. Popper, preparing the report for the association, concluded that the economic strain probably would prevent Japan from achieving a complete military conquest.

"Even if the Chinese government should be driven back from the coast and from Hankow, it may conceivably succeed in organizing an almost self-sufficient semimilitary state in the unconquered interior which would be an important source of resistance to Japan," he said.

"And whatever the fate of the Chiang Kai-shek regime, Japan's civilian and military leaders openly state that it will be years before Chinese opposition can be completely eradicated from the areas now held by its armies."

Reporter in Plane Sees Chinese Scattering in Endless Groups

Chinese

more than 200,000 Chinese are hopelessly trapped.

I saw Japanese tanks pursuing fleeing Chinese soldiers.

Plane Flies Unarmed.

Here and there were other white puffs that rolled upward as Chinese soldiers spotted our plane and took pot shots at us.

The trip over the battle zone was made in a single-engined, unarmed transport plane without an escort of fighting ships.

We were confident no Chinese planes would appear. None did. Thus our chief concern was limited to stray rifle shots or a forced landing in Chinese lines.

Following the east-west Lunghai Railway and the north-south Tientsin-Pukow Railway we saw signs of war on all sides.

The scene below was a panorama of ruined or burned villages, smashed bridges, shell-marked farm houses and endless zigzag lines of trenches.

Chinese Take to Fields.

Through field glasses I saw a group of Chinese run for cover at the sight of our plane, throwing themselves headlong behind trees and into ditches.

I saw Japanese soldiers leap from trucks in pursuit of Chinese vanishing and reappearing as they darted through clouds of yellow dust.

This was no longer trench warfare. It was open highway and field fighting, terrifying in its scope.

In close pursuit was a Japanese unit, led by lumbering tanks.

Endless Groups Flee.

Three times in 15 minutes we witnessed much the same situation.

In one instance Japanese trucks were lining up outside a small village, while in the fields outside were tiny black animated dots against a green background—Chinese about to be attacked.

At one point east of the Tientsin-Pukow railway line a long Chinese column moved unimpeded into a mountainous region.

Col. Matsojiro Kimura, of the Japanese field staff, who accompanied me, kept his field glasses glued to his eyes.

"Chinese," he repeated over and over again.

Kimura, a heavy-set indefatigable soldier, holds the title of honorary major of the Twenty-third Infantry of the United States Army.

He was assigned to the United States as a language officer five years ago and spent six months at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Long Japanese Column.

At the northern end of the battle area we saw one Japanese column stretching at least two miles along the highway. It included a long train of trucks and cavalry troops.

A green, elephant-shaped observation balloon tugged at its cables as it was hauled along in the line of march.

The north and south sections of Suchow were a shambles but the center of town appeared untouched.

We dipped low enough to see long lines of abandoned freight cars, with here and there a locomotive, their boilers cold.

In streets on the outskirts of Suchow were gray-clad bodies sprawled in profusion.

Follows Lunghai.

From a point where a shattered iron bridge marked the spot where the Japanese first broke the railway, the Lunghai pointed away into white mist where the Japanese and Chinese continued to battle for possession of the line.

As we neared the fighting the danger of Chinese planes increased, but none came.

A Japanese pursuit plane dashed toward us through the mist. The pilot identified us, dipped his wings and roared away.

Cost in Only 2 Years Cited; Industrialists Called Real Labor Chiefs.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 22.—William J. Cameron, spokesman for the Ford Motor Co., said in a radio address tonight that strikes were responsible for the fact that "during the last two years, when employment was the one thing most desired, more than 42 million days' work was left undone by those engaged to do it."

"This does not represent unemployment, but actual employment suppressed by that voluntary stoppage known as strikes," he asserted. "In those two years the Nation and individuals lost 115,000 years of 365 days each; or in terms of the five-day week, 161,530 years.

"The same (United States Government) report shows in the five years of 1933-1937, inclusive, this loss reached the enormous today of 93,000,000 days, or 361,000 years, of employment."

Calls Bosses Labor Leaders.

"No one seriously contends," said Cameron, "that in this the most enlightened country industrially general conditions ever have justified the tremendous setback of 93,000,000 wasted days."

"Leaders of protest," he continued, "censors of bad working conditions, undoubtedly have a legitimate place where bad conditions exist.

"But the man who sets up the job, starts the work, serves the public so that the work may go on, deals fairly with his plant so that the product may go on, and distributes their proper share to all who participate in the work that they and their community may go on—to him the title of labor leader truly belongs.

U. S. "On the Spot."

"We need more of these men. We need also to see, whether employes or employers, that 'we are all on the spot,' as Mr. Ford recently put it. And all of us are on the spot."

Cameron predicted that "this country is headed for employment, not idleness; for a better industrial order, not a calculated chaos."

Hess to Oppose Conservative in Fall Campaign

Oregon Democrat to Battle Salem Publisher for Governorship.

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Oreg., May 22.—A clear-cut liberal-conservative battle appeared in prospect for Oregon's gubernatorial campaign this fall as returns trickled in from remote precincts in Friday's primary election.

Charles Martin, 74-year-old Governor, who claimed loyalty to the New Deal without "rubber-stamp" submission, trailed Henry Hess, of La Grande, by more than 6,000 votes with less than 30 of the State's 1,681 precincts unreported.

Hess had polled 58,806 votes to Martin's 52,148 in 1,650 precincts.

Hess, supported by the State's liberal factions, will be opposed in November by Charles Sprague, Salem publisher, who polled 60,913 votes in 1,635 precincts to 23,699 for Sam H. Brown, his nearest rival in the Republican race.

A comparison of the total Republican and Democatic vote was not available.

Republican leaders predicted strong support from the Martin faction of the Democratic side would enhance Sprague's chances of leading the Republicans to victory in the State contest in November.

Willis Mahoney, former Klamath Falls mayor, who as the Democratic nominee gave Senator Charles McNary a close race in the last election, will oppose Rufus C. Holman, State treasurer, for the next regular-term senatorship.

Voters will choose between Alex G. Barry, Republican, and Robert A. Miller, Democrat, to fill the Senate post from the general election, when the appointive tenure of Senator Evans Reams will end, until the next regular term begins.

All three incumbents won renomination for Representative in Congress. In the First District, James W. Mott, Republican, will be challenged by Andrew C. Burk, his fellow townsman of Salem, Democrat.

The ADA Amendments.

In many respects the most important local bill awaiting action by Congress at this session is that proposing amendments to the District alley dwelling act. Enactment of this measure is essential to grant Washington privileges already accorded all other cities. Without it the work of reclaiming slums would be seriously handicapped here while it proceeds with quickened pace elsewhere.

One amendment would permit the Alley Dwelling Authority to erect low-rental housing projects outside of slum areas to accommodate "persons or families substantially equal in number to those who are to be deprived of habitation" through the destruction of alley hovels. That power is necessary to prevent a decrease in the number of dwellings available to families of low income because of the ADA's activities. Since many alleys cleared of insanitary living quarters are not fit for redevelopment as residential areas, use of outlying sites to make up this housing deficiency is a first essential of a well-rounded program.

The second important amendment would authorize the ADA to borrow $1,000,000 per year during each of the next five years for the reclamation of alley squares suitable only for commercial, industrial or other nonresidential purposes. To that agency has been assigned the task of cleaning up all of Washington's inhabited alleys. Its work could not be completed without funds for redevelopment of commercial as well as residential areas.

Under an entirely new title the ADA would also be permitted to borrow funds from the United States Housing Authority on the same terms as other local agencies throughout the country. Local contributions amounting to 10 per cent of the cost of housing projects would be required, as in the case of other communities. Since Congress holds a rigid grip on the District's purse strings, this provision may work a hardship on the ADA. But the principle of local contributions to undertakings of this sort is sound and ought to be applied in Washington as in other communities.

The question of subsidies for local projects will remain to be worked out between the ADA and the USHA. In view of the ADA's achievements to date and the USHA's desire to facilitate slum clearance everywhere, that should be a relatively simple problem. The immediate concern is enactment of the proposed amendments to make available to the ADA a source of funds for low-cost dwellings. If Congress is fully acquainted with the purpose of and the need for this bill it will not likely adjourn without passing it.

More Farm Subsidies?

Among the amendments to the spending-lending bill approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee is an item of $212,000,000 to cover parity price payments on cotton, corn and wheat. The aim is to raise the purchasing power of farmers toward the 1909-1914 level as contemplated by the 1938 farm act. At present prices for leading farm crops are far below their computed parities. It is estimated that it would cost nearly $1,000,000,000 to make full parity payments this year on wheat and cotton alone.

As a matter of fact, Congress made not the slightest provision in the farm act for the actual payment of parity benefits and there was a strong intimation that none would be forthcoming. "If and when appropriations are made," the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to allocate them among specified groups of producers to provide returns "as nearly equal to parity price as the funds so made available will permit." President Roosevelt in signing the measure also pointed out that parity payments would increase the cost of the farm program. He warned that it would be necessary to find new sources of revenue to cover any outlays of this sort.

As might have been expected, spokesmen for the farmers have not been slow to take advantage of the opening provided by the pump-priming plan to demand parity payments. And Congress has put itself in a position where effective resistance is difficult. The farmers have good cause to feel aggrieved by the way in which Congress has aroused their hopes of achieving parity incomes and then failed to provide funds for the purpose. However, viewed objectively, there appears to be no justification whatever for adding another subsidy to the large sums already voted for farm aid.

If parity payments even on the proposed limited scale were to be added to the direct benefit payments carried by the farm act, the total outlay would exceed the amount expended for benefits in any single year under the original AAA. These direct payments, moreover, account for only part of the subsidies bestowed upon farmers. The pump-priming bill, for instance, carries an appropriation of $175,000,000 for the Farm Security Administration. In essence this program consists of making small loans to needy farmers to provide subsistence and enable them to eventually become self-supporting.

A pending bill would also extend for two more years the emergency low rates on farm mortgages held by Federal agencies. This interest subsidy alone is costing the Government about $60,000,000 yearly. The loans made by the Commodity Credit Corporation are likewise advanced under conditions that in effect subsidize farm borrowers, with net losses for the Government. These items, and they do not exhaust the list of benefits enjoyed by farmers, add up to a formidable total. They suggest that even if there were no economic and financial reasons for imposing a check upon farm subsidies, the farmer is getting more than his share of benefits in a country with a preponderance of industrial workers.

The New Court Controversy.

Official criticism of the Supreme Court's decision in the Kansas City Stockyards case has made a vital issue of the procedure followed by the Government's administrative agencies. The most belligerent censure has come from Secretary Wallace, who intimates that "another battle" against the courts is in prospect. In a milder tone, Edwin S. Smith of the National Labor Relations Board has joined in the criticism. And Solicitor General Jackson has filed a petition for a rehearing of the Kansas City case.

Apparently the Administration fears encroachment by the courts upon the functions of its so-called independent agencies and is determined to resist any such trend. There is good reason for dissatisfaction over the present confusion in this field. But conditions certainly will not be improved by another attack upon the courts. It is a positive and not a negative approach that is called for.

Secretary Wallace's resentment over the outcome of the stockyards case seems to arise from the fact that his fight against the rates charged by Kansas City commission men and their attorneys is back where it started from five years ago. That is indeed a discouraging experience. It suggests that something is radically wrong with the present approach to problems of this sort. But it cannot be shown that the chief difficulty lies in the courts.

On its face, the argument made against the Supreme Court's recent decision is striking. Administration spokesmen contend that when the case first went before the court two years ago it held that an examiner's report to the parties concerned was not essential to the validity of the hearing. Now, they say, the court has reversed its position and holds that the absence of such a report was a "vital defect." The court is put in the position of having acted in an arbitrary manner. But that is a very strained interpretation of the facts.

When the case was first before the court it did not know whether Secretary Wallace had read the evidence or considered the arguments before issuing his order. The case was sent back to the district court with instructions to obtain this information and to determine whether the plaintiffs had been accorded a proper hearing. It was under these circumstances that the court said, with reference to submission of an examiner's report: "We cannot say that that particular type of procedure was essential to the validity of the hearing."

Undoubtedly the court could have made the requirements of a fair hearing more clear than it did in that original opinion. For its failure to do so it may be properly criticized. But it can scarcely be said that the court has reversed its position. Rather it has made specific what it was then forced to say conditionally because full information was not before it.

Moreover, the court has not now said, as Secretary Wallace appears to believe, that the submission of an examiner's report to the parties involved in disputes of this sort is invariably essential. The central point of its ruling seems to be that the aggrieved party has a right to know the specific charges, claims or proposals detrimental to his interest, and that he must be given a right to contest them.

This case, however, is a mere incident in the general confusion over administrative practices. The real difficulty seems to arise, not from the rulings of the court, but from the failure of Congress to prescribe adequate administrative procedure for its numerous quasi-judicial agencies. In the absence of any law on the subject the courts are compelled to lay down at least some broad standards to preserve the rights of citizens in dealing with these agencies.

For a number of years the Committee on Administrative Law of the American Bar Association has been working on this problem. Last year that committee drafted a bill to set up interdepartmental administrative boards and to prescribe for them a systematic procedure. It is interesting to note that the procedure it outlines for the independent commissions is indentical with that approved by the Supreme Court in the stockyards decision.

Following its recent indorsement by the board of governors of the Bar Association, this bill was sent to the Senate Judiciary Committee. It appears to offer at least the basis for a solution to the present tangle over administrative procedure. In any event, the place to attack the dilemma is in Congress. A campaign against the courts for their admittedly ineffective efforts to bridge over the deficiencies of existing laws would be more likely to accentuate the confusion than to minimize it.

After The Fall Of Suchow.

In the jubilant opinion of the Japanese high command the fall of Suchow, at the junction of the north-south Tientsin-Pukow and the east-west Lunghai railroads, marks the beginning of the end of Chinese resistance.

This victory, said Gen. Shunroku Hata, commander of the Japanese forces in Central China, is "only a hop, in the hop, skip and jump into Hankow." Apparently the invaders intend to press on toward China's temporary capital, convinced that its capture is not far distant.

Suchow proved no easy nut to crack. It took five months of steadily increasing efforts by the invaders to drive the Chinese forces out of this strategic rail center. The Japanese needed the victory badly. With Suchow and the Lunghai railroad still in Chinese hands it was impossible to consolidate the puppet regimes established by Tokyo at Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai and Nanking. Moreover, after the defeat at Taierhchwang, the greatest Japanese military disaster of modern times, it became necessary to win a striking victory to wipe out that stain.

It cannot be gainsaid that the capture of Suchow has very real potential value to the invaders. They are now in a position to consolidate their gains in China and unite their forces operating from the north and the south on the Tientsin-Pukow railroad. Nonetheless the victory cannot be regarded as decisive so long as the Chinese continue to fight on.

The indications are that the great bulk of Chiang Kai-shek's fighting force in the Central Chinese zone managed to evade the Japanese pincers, staged an orderly retreat to the west and are now reorganizing their lines in defense of the Lunghai railroad and of Hankow. This circumstance creates unpleasant possibilities for the Japanese.

For instance, it makes it necessary for the invaders to press still farther into the interior in the hope of dealing the Chinese armies that vital blow needed to end the war. But the farther Japan's westward penetration goes the greater the number of men that are needed since every town and every mile of railroad captured must be garrisoned. At the same time the deeper the Japanese go into China's interior the farther they get from their sources of supply and the more vulnerable become their lines of communication.

Even at present, the hold which the Japanese have over the territory they have conquered remains precarious, as suggested by the constant guerrilla attacks on their positions. But with Chiang Kai-shek's very considerable army intact Japan cannot rest content with the territory already gained. She must go on until every vestige of Chinese resistance has been broken. And that goal appears to be a long way off.

Boomerang Propaganda.

In making a speech arguing that the supporters of the Barcelona government were not the devils and the supporters of Franco not the angels which Spanish nationalist propaganda had made them out to be, Gen. Juan Yague, one of Franco's ablest subordinates, got himself into hot water.

This was inevitable. Gen. Yague was telling the truth and some truths in wartime are tantamount to treason. For truth often runs counter to carefully propagated myths deemed essential to keep up the morale of soldiers and civilians.

To unprejudiced minds, however, it is obvious that war-time propaganda sometimes has the characteristics of a boomerang. During the World War, for instance, the German people were repeatedly told that America's participation held out no real danger to the Reich since the United States could not even begin sending troops to the western front in time to prevent Hindenburg and Ludendorff from dealing a crushing blow to the Allies. Not surprisingly, therefore, when this propaganda proved false, the German people lost faith in their leaders and began to clamor for peace.

War propagandists have learned very little since then. During the early months of the Sino-Japanese conflict, the Chinese authorities sought to cheer up their people and win the plaudits of the world by repeatedly issuing reports of victory. Disillusionment was certain when these reports were followed not by victory but by defeat. On the other hand, the Japanese leaders no doubt regret having portrayed the war in China as a walkover for the soldiers of the Mikado.

"The enemy Spaniards, like ourselves," Gen. Yague said, "are fighting with admirable courage and as for the Internationals on the other side, we take good care not to mention the Italians and Germans on our side who behave like beasts of prey. I don't see what benefit we get from continually harping on the enemy's being demoralized, leaderless and cowardly, when in doing so we only belittle ourselves, as we have so far been unable to gain a decisive victory over that allegedly inferior enemy."

Gen. Yague was butting his head against a stone wall. The very reasonableness of his plea condemned him. For war and reason, like oil and water, do not mix.

Gov. Allred, of Texas, says he will not run for re-election because he doesn't want to make any more speeches. Texans should rise up and re-elect him by acclamation.

Starling Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have recently noticed several articles anent the discovery by the Department of Agriculture that our friends, the starlings, leave the city in the morning only to return at night to roost. Several reasons have been put forward for their conduct but none, I believe, has fully explained it.

The birds, closely related to our own blackbirds, fly out to the fields in the morning for the same reason other birds do—food. They feed in the early morning and in the late afternoon and spend their midday hours in the shade close to running water. Late in the day they return to their roosts in the city.

Undoubtedly the birds like to roost on our massive public buildings because those buildings have been absorbing heat all day and provide warm quarters against the chill of the night. Why should a sensible bird roost i. an exposed tree in the country where he would be subject to extermination by the farmer's shotgun, when he can find a snug nest and sympathetic protection in the Capital?

No kind of bird likes to have his feet entangled or his feathers so I would suggest that Government chemists evolve some harmless, but thoroughly sticky moisture and sun-proof substance with which to surface-treat ledges, sills and eaves of buildings.

The starlings would then be forced to roost in the country and the farmer would surreptitiously go about his task of destroying them, possibly without incurring the wrath of our various militant societies—groups which might better employ their energy and money in forming a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Man.

Federal Employes' Rights.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial published on May 19 The Post condemns as "grossly improper" the action of a local union of Government employes in adopting a resolution relating to our Government's foreign policy. You argue that it is "inadmissible for Government employes in an organized capacity to indulge in advice to their impersonal employer—the state," because "they are themselves instrumentalities for carrying out the plans and policies of an organized society."

Just how will a resolution, openly and publicly adopted by a group of citizens who happen to work for the Government interfere with the service they render their employer? You surely do not contend that Government employes should be deprived of the right to vote. Why is their expression of opinion on public issues any more "obstructive" when it takes the form of open discussion? Many an employe, both in the Government and elsewhere, performs his work faithfully even though he has and expresses views of his own regarding his employer's policies.

Free discussion is necessary to democracy, even though it may, at times, seem to hinder "the orderly functioning of government." To say that any class of citizens may not "indulge in advice" to the state, because it is "their impersonal employer," seems to me a step toward fascism.

You confuse the issue when you talk of a hypothetical strike by Government employes, and of "revolution." Neither is inolved here. Indeed, the right of free discussion and of peaceful petition is one of the surest safeguards against any possible attempt at a forcible settlement of disputes.

This was recognized by the authors of the Bill of Rights, for the first amendment to the Constitution guarantees "the freedom of speech" and "the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." A citizen does not forfeit those rights when he enters the public service.

ALLEN HEALD.
Arlington, Va., May 21.

We Do Not Approve.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Congressional Record of May 2 there appears an amazing and sensational revelation by Senator Schwellenbach that a chain of newspapers in Washington and Oregon had invented and published false indorsements of its four-point recovery program by four United States Senators and the President of the Brookings Institution. I have not seen this important news published in The Post or in any other newspaper that comes to my attention.

Senator Schwellenbach first heard of the false indorsements when one of his constituents wrote congratulating him on having joined with Senator Bone Senator Nye, Senator Capper and Dr. Moulton in ratifying and approving the Scripps League four-point program. Senator Schwellenbach was astounded, went to call on Senator Bone, who was equally astounded; the two then got in touch with the remaining victims, all of whom expressed equal amazement. The five indorsements of the so-called recovery program were complete literary forgeries.

This seems to me, and I am sure it will seem to your readers, an important piece of news. A chain of newspapers publishes forgeries over the signatures of five important public men. The crime is exposed in the United States Senate. News of it is suppressed by the American newspapers. What are we to think of this? Is this newspaper practice so common that it is not worth mentioning in The Post? Does The Post approve of these forgeries? Are they a specimen of the freedom of the press which must be guarded from Senator Minton's proposal to punish newspaper lies by law?

The Post has devoted a great deal of space to denouncing Senator Minton's proposal. But the silence with which it passes over this bit of news surpasses in eloquence all its labored arguments. To my mind it even wins the debate for Senator Minton.

BENJAMIN GINZBERG.
Washington, May 9.

Arguments For Lifting Arms Embargo.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have given very careful consideration to the letter, dated May 12, of Secretary of State Cordell Hull, to the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which letter, we understand, formed the basis of the committee's decision to table the Nye resolution.

We are in complete accord with the Secretary's view that "our first solicitude should be the peace and welfare of this country" and our Government's policy toward Spain should be examined in that light.

Our Government's policy toward Spain followed, it appears, the nonintervention agreement of 27 governments of Europe, "designed to carry out a concerted policy of nonintervention in the conflict." The nonintervention agreement, however, has broken down; Germany and Italy have openly violated the obligation embodied in the nonintervention agreement not to send war materials or combatants to either party in the Spanish conflict. In this connection, no less an authority on foreign policy than Dr. Raymond L. Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, in his letter of March 23, 1938, to Secretary Hull, has said:

"The adoption of the policy prohibiting the shipment of war materials to Spain may have been originally justified by the belief that the London nonintervention committee would effectually bar shipments to both sides; but it is a notorious fact that the committee failed in its objective and that Franco today is being assisted by vast quantities of supplies from Italy and Germany and by at least 60,000 Italian troops. The loyalist government is no longer fighting a purely civil war, but is resisting a foreign invasion.

"It may be true that the United States in this instance is merely following the lead of France and Britain, and I realize the difficulties of acting in independence of these powers in this matter. I believe this country is thoroughly justified, however, in following an independent policy if it is the purpose of correcting what has proved to be an obvious injustice. We are not party to the nonintervention agreement; we are not confronted by the same danger as France and Great Britain; in this instance, therefore, we are in a position to act alone."

Secretary Hull states that the Nye resolution, if enacted, "would lift the embargo . . . in respect to shipments of arms to one party while leaving in effect the embargo in respect to shipments to the other party." It would be well to recall that, until the joint resolution of January 8, 1937, it was the established policy of the United States to sell arms to friendly governments engaged in suppressing revolt and to deny to rebels the right to purchase arms.

The Secretary's letter states that "even if the legislation applied to both parties, its enactment would still subject us to unnecessary risks we have so far avoided." We fail to see how such legislation "would still subject us to unnecessary risks." The Nye resolution specifically provides that no war materials shall be owned by American citizens and that shipments thereof shall not be made in American bottoms or ships flying the American flag." Thus under no circumstances could American interests be involved; under no circumstances would we be subject to risks.

Secretary Hull is of the opinion that "any proposal which at this juncture contemplates reversal of our policy of strict noninterference . . . would offer a real possibility of complications." With respect to "our policy of strict noninterference," Dr. Buell has pointed out that "under the present law the United States assumes responsibility for shutting the loyalists out of this market, although it is a notorious fact that Franco is obtaining extensive support from Italy." If the embargo were lifted, our Government "would be relieved of the responsibility which, as now exercised, indirectly makes us an ally of Franco" (see reprint). As we have heretofore pointed out, no possible complications could arise. It is imperative that we deal realistically with the issues involved so that the good name of the United States be maintained.

Secretary Hull's letter concides with the statement that "if reconsideration is to be given to a revision of our neutrality legislation it would be more useful to reconsider it in its broader aspects in the light of the practical experience gained during the past two or three years rather than to rewrite it piecemeal in relation to a particular situation."

Unfortunately, the foreign invasion of Spain does not halt pending the convening of Congress in 1939. If the status quo of the Spanish conflict could be immovably frozen, postponement of action by the Congress might theoretically be justified. But we are confronted with a living situation—a continuing status of injustice, which must be righted now.

It comes with cruel irony to declare against rewriting our neutrality legislation "piecemeal in relation to a particular situation." The joint resolution of January 8, 1937, imposing the embargo on arms to Spain was piecemeal legislation in relation to a particular situation—and rushed through Congress with the most precipitate speed, in exactly one day, even though it was an abandonment of traditional American foreign policy.

In the light of these considerations, it is imperative that the embargo on arms to Spain be lifted at this session of Congress.

The Post Impressionist

The Modern Manner.

He was verily an ancient mariner and he stoppeth one of three—that being me. His request, or rather demand, seemed simple of compliance but, when he came to specifications, compliance became somewhat—indeed, very—complicated.

Could I tell him, he demanded, where in the Nation's Capital he could find an old-fashioned saloon? Before he came to the word "saloon" I was confident I could answer his question promptly. Old-fashioned are obtainable by the bale, I knew. But when he added the word "saloon" I knew I was confronted with what is technically known as a poser. My confidence melted like ice in a hot toddy (if there ever could be such an astonishing concoction).

I had heard or read somewhere that there are some 700 places in Washington where alcoholic beverages are legally dispensed, and in the course of certain sociological investigations I had visited quite a number. But now that the question had been fired at me point-blank I could not for the life of me recall one that even approached the specifications of an old-time saloon.

* * *

The old goat quickly discerned I was floundering.

"Is there," he declared, "a saloon where there is sawdust on the floor?"

"Er, no, I am afraid I do not recall having seen either that or a wooden Indian in some years."

"Is there," he went on relentlessly, fixing me with a piercing eye, "one where there are handsome gold-framed pictures of Lillian Russell, John L. Sullivan and Peter Manning, the great trotter, adorning the walls?"

"If there is," I replied, "I am afraid it has eluded me."

"Is there one where an ornate Rock-and-Rye bottle reposes on the back bar?"

"I am afraid I have not seen one of those wonderful excuses for taking a nip to 'cure a cold' since before the late lamented Prohibition era," I sighed.

"Is there one with a beautiful large round table heaped high with inviting viands, known to the hoi polloi as Free Lunch?"

"Well, you see there are some legal restraints upon dispensing food gratis in places where liquor or beer may be obtained," I answered, somewhat elated that I could account in some measure for the seeming disappearance of all the old familiar aspects of drinking places.

"And could you direct me to one where there is a Family Entrance, where the Old Woman could timidly hand in a can for a Scuttle of Suds?"

Well, I could come back at him strong on this.

"Today, my dear fellow, the entire family, including babes in arms, boldly enters through the main, front door."

"Ah, that also is a requirement of the law."

Astonishment wreathed my interrogator's ancient visage.

"And one may not lean negligently against the bar, in the full stature of manhood, and exchange badinage with the barkeep?"

"Not only that, but only infrequently will one find the serving person inclined to conversation in any degree beyond 'What will it be,' or more likely a dignified lifting of the eye in inquiry."

* * *

My hoary friend was tottering by now and I felt I soon would have him on the ropes. Maliciously I went to work on him.

"And furthermore, old salt, if one desires something more potent than beer or light wine, he will have to desert the bar entirely and amble over to a table. That has an economic value in promoting tipping. And furthermore, there is no such thing as Free Lunch in Washington. The word has joined the dodo bird and the bustle in the limbo of forgotten things. Its successor may be anything from a Hamburger Stand to a swanky Cocktail Lounge."

"My gracious," exclaimed the sailor of the Seven Seas. "Do they even make 'em lie down to take a drink!"

"Well, the word lounge is merely a euphemism," I explained. "And furthermore, my friend, try and pour your own drink as you did back in your horse-and-buggy days."

"But why? I may be old but I am still able-bodied."

"You see, the bartender needs exercise. The days of Four Fingers of Rye are gone forever."

My victim was quite groggy by this time but he rallied enough to stagger me with this discovery he had made for himself:

"You know, I'll be darned if I didn't go into a place up the street a bit ago and was just lifting a lip over a glass of lager (you know that's what we used to call beer) and right over the back bar, staring me in the face, was a big sign saying 'Gents Will Please Remove Their Hats at the Bar!'"

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Confidential.

DUCE!

PEGLER.

As commanding officer of the irresistible hordes who have been enforcing your inflexible will in Spain I have the honor to submit recommendations based on the practical lessons of the glorious events at Guadalajara, which I trust I may, without immodesty, describe as the Little Caporetto.

FIRST, I earnestly recommend that, in the interests of economy and efficiency, your invincible legions henceforth be armed with wooden or papier-mache rifles, tin pea-shooters or some other weapon of purely nominal type and of the cheapest materials and construction. The piece at present issued to your valiant Black Shirts is an expensive and dangerous incumbrance. It is too costly to be thrown away in vast numbers when your heroes start advancing to the rear with the utmost rapidity and too heavy to permit the development of maximum speed. Moreover, our enemies have not been above seizing them where they have been discarded and shooting our conquering legions in the rear—the act of a cowardly foe, to be sure, but characteristic of the disorderly rabble which still rejects the heroic glories of Fascism.

SECOND, I urge, Oh Duce, that our General Staff begin experimenting with roads made of cork or some springy composition used in the construction of indoor running tracks. Runners performing on this type of track can save one-tenth of a second in every hundred yards. True, our contemptible enemies will try to retreat on our heels, but they will be running in hobnailed field shoes of clumsy type, whereas I recommend that the servants of your irresistible determination be equipped with featherweight track shoes. Moreover, Oh Duce, I propose that our engineers prepare a variety of misleading highway signs, or markers, to be posted at intersections along the line of our dashing charge to the rear. These signs, or markers, should read, "Il Duce's irresistible hosts went this way ten minutes ago; weather clear, track fast; going like hell;" "No use pursuing Il Duce's unconquerables this way; they turned sharp left," and "Pedestrian traffic forbidden."

THIRD, I strongly suggest, Oh Duce, that there be issued to your victorious legions a stout but lightweight sheet of body armor to be worn inside the trousers, astern, as our favorite strategy exposes our heroes to wounds in this sector. Needless to say, it is bad for our prestige to have so many wounded going around wearing this portion of their anatomy in slings.

FOURTH, I recommend the organization of a fly-paper company as a unit of each regiment to unroll sheets of sticky paper on the highways, after our indomitables have passed by, to retard the forward retirement of the enemy.

FIFTH, Oh Duce, I call attention to the fact that our comrades in the Rome-Berlin axis are now sitting right on top of us and that they are exceedingly tough mugs who have sworn to Anschluss all their minorities and therefore probably will steal back the 250,000 captive Heinies in our Tyrol one of these days. When this happens your invincible ranks will not only need all their speed but should be provided with adequate springboard facilities at Brindisi, on the Adriatic and at points on the Ionian Sea. With proper facilities and adequate training they should be able to dive clear over into Albania or Greece or half-way to Libya in one graceful leap. Steps should be taken to teach them to shout jubilantly the victory cry of "Duce a noi!" in midair as they execute this phase of their charge.

SIXTH, I propose that our service of supply keep on hand at all times for this emergency a large store of Munich beer, weinerwurst and limburger to be placed at strategic points in the rear of our advance as a means of retarding the disorganized retreats of the Nazis until the Cockney Tommies of London can get down to head them off again, as in the glorious days of Caporetto.

And, FINALLY, Oh Duce, I urgently propose that you use your influence to compel the civilized nations of the world to use silent guns and shells, as the present equipment makes a terribly loud noise—"Bang! Bang! Bang!" all the time—and makes your invincible legions so nervous that they will not be able to do full justice to your inflexible will.

Oh Duce!
Oh Duce, Duce!
Kootchey-kootchey, Duce!

'For The Fatherland'

By Marcia Dodd

German Casualties In Spain.

THOUGH THE NEWS in the German press of the Spanish war is utterly perverted, the common man nevertheless understands that after more than a year and a half the end is not yet in sight. Unlike Mussolini, Hitler has not announced through press and propaganda Germany's part in this tragic struggle. But the news leaks out from all sorts of sources and there is not a man or woman in Germany who does not know his country is deeply involved, not so much in men, but in arms and ammunition.

The fact that this war is not yet finished creates a nervousness in all groups, Nazi and anti-Nazi alike. They fear that Europe itself is in constant danger of being caught up in the conflagration.

Occasionally a mother or sister or other relative will receive a curt note telling of the death of a loved one, killed for the fatherland in Spain. They are forbidden to mourn or to tell their friends. They do mourn and they do tell their friends.

* * * *

A WOMAN in heavy mourning met a friend of mine, by arrangement, in the park. Through her weeping my friend heard the painful questions. "What was he doing in Spain? When he left he told me he was going to military camp. My friend explained to her that this excuse is often the only one the leaders can use. Then the woman added: "We read in the newspapers that communism must be wiped out in Spain. But what business is it of ours to stamp out communism so far away? What connection is there between our fatherland and the war in Spain?" Finally she added, distraught: "If my boy died for his fatherland, why am I forbidden to mourn for him or communicate with any one one the circumstances of his death?"

One would think that Hitler, seemingly so sure of power, so effective in his mutilation of human freedom, after five years during which time he proudly states he has welded and united the German nation for a thousand years to come, would now allow himself the luxury of loosening the reins of terror he holds.

(Woman's Home Companion.)

The Hymn Of Defiance.

Argument continues on the proposal of an orchestra leader, or of several orchestra leaders, to alter our National Anthem to bring the high notes within the range of nonprofessional sopranos, contraltos, or even ordinary citizens.

But who wants to sing it?

"The Star-Spangled Banner" can be best rendered by an Army band. As the last notes of bugles sounding "Retreat" fade on a summer's breeze, and rigid ranks come to "Present Arms," the brasses crash into a crescendo that bears the spirit along with it to those unreachable high notes that the flutes and piccolos take in their stride in a shriek of defiance. Then, indeed, can it win thrilled tribute as the most patriotically inspiring of all national anthems—despite its descent from "Anacreon."

In times of stress, a beautiful voice can bring it to heights of devotion, but it is not intended to be sung lightly or on street corners. "America" or "The Red, White and Blue" will do for ordinary occasions, but let the high notes of the National Anthem preserve it for the graver and more ceremonious moments.

Report On Far Eastern War

Japan Lost Illusions About Foe's Force At Shanghai.

By Frank H. Hedges.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Tokyo.

INSTEAD OF the hackneyed form of greeting heard for centuries past, today when two Japanese meet or when a Japanese encounters a foreign friend, the first words are more apt to be: "How long will this 'war' with China last?" or "How much longer do you think Chiang Kai-shek can hold out against the Japanese army?"

If the person so accosted, be he Japanese, American or European, is intelligent and honest and at all informed of actual conditions, there is only one reply possible, and that is: "I do not know." Frequently he will add that he fears it will be a very long time indeed, perhaps a year, perhaps two years or maybe for an even longer and indefinite period.

Ever since the Sino-Japanese hostilities in North China settled down to serious fighting, and certainly following the opening of the second major battlefront at Shanghai on August 13, Japan and the Japanese have known that they were in for long-drawn-out and protracted hostilities on a truly major scale. The chancelleries of some of the powers were more optimistic, and their heads issued statements to the press which look silly today in the light of the heavy battling during the past ten months.

No such illusions were entertained in the Japanese empire itself, and the government has consistently abjured the people to prepare to make all sacrifices necessary, whether of life itself or merely the comforts of life, in order that the empire might triumph over its continental neighbor.

Mistaken Contempt For Chinese Costly.

ONLY ONCE has this realization of the gigantic task before it weakened in Japan, and Japan is paying the price today for that temporary overconfidence in its own might and mistaken contempt of the Chinese foe.

When Shanghai finally fell and the Japanese army left that city to pursue the retreating Chinese toward Nanking, there was a complete collapse of morale in more than one, but not all, of the Chinese army divisions set to defend the approaches to the Chinese capital. This panic was especially notable among the troops formerly commanded by the "Young Marshal," Changh Hsueh-liang, he who captured the generalissimo in December of 1936 in an attempt to force the war with Japan at that juncture. The "Young Marshal" is an unofficial prisoner, presumably eating his heart out because he is not now allowed to participate in the active fighting.

China had magnificent defenses built behind Shanghai, but the soldiers of Dai Nippon simply marched through them. The only explanation the Chinese defenders could offer was that they had mistaken these khaki-clad Japanese for their own retreating gray cotton garbed men of battle.

It is known, although not generally, that the able German advisers of the generalissimo had counseled his abandonment of Shanghai some three weeks prior to its actual evacuation, and making a major stand on these defenses. If Chang Kai-shek had followed this advice, there would have been no disorganization, no panic among his troops as they marched out of Shanghai to take up their strong positions, where they could easily have held the Japanese at bay for two months or longer.

It is only fair to point out that the German military advisers considered the problem only from the military and strategic viewpoint, while the generalissimo had to take into full consideration the political and psychological as well. If he forsook Shanghai too hastily, disaffection among his own troops and his own people might well have arisen.

This is even more true when, a short time later, the German officers advised the abandonment of Nanking without a struggle and the selection by Chiang of a more advantageous battleground, but how could the generalissimo treat the beloved capital city of the New China in so cavalier a fashion without rousing indignation, and even fury, among millions of his fellow-countrymen? And so the Japanese march on Nanking became something closely resembling a Chinese rout and a Japanese juggernaut.

Blunder At Nanking Now Being Understood.

IT WAS at this point that Japan made its greatest blunder of the war, and one for which it is now paying dearly.

What is held to be a serious blunder also had been made a week or so previously. There was a strong, influential and powerful group among the leaders of the Nanking government who were ready to talk peace with Tokyo after the fall of Shanghai and before the occupation of Nanking. A fairly reasonable peace could have been made at that time, one which would have proved mutually beneficial and one which would not have cost either nation too great a loss of "face." The opportunity was muffed, and these Chinese leaders are probably now powerless to go forward with their peace proposals. Most certainly, with the retreat of the Chinese capital into the interior, they are completely out of touch with the Japanese even to talk over peace terms, should they so desire.

The later blunder at Nanking sprang either from Japan's overconfidence, as a result of the victorious march upon the Chinese capital, or from Japan's underestimation of Chinese strength and, especially, morale.

If Japan had advanced northward immediately following the capture of Nanking, there is little doubt but that it would have reached and crossed the Yellow River, would have occupied the strategic junction city of Suchow, and so would have united with the Japanese column advancing from the south and the Japanese column coming down through Shantung from the north. This would have given Tokyo complete command of the Tsin-pu Railway connecting Peking and Shanghai and of the Chinese littoral from a point south of Shanghai to the borders of Manchukuo.

It is possible that the Japanese troops, following the severe fighting at Shanghai and the rapid march upon Nanking, were so exhausted they were in no shape to take further aggressive action at that moment, but whether this be true or false cannot be ascertained in Tokyo. What is known is that the Japanese army in occupation of Nanking settled down to several weeks of ease, of looting and other crimes which form the blackest page of the Sino-Japanese struggle and are known to all the world save to the Japanese population in the homeland, where the censor obtains but little rest.

What is also known is that this interlude, this breathing spell in the prevoiusly relentless Japanese campaign, afforded the Chinese the sorely needed time to reorganize their forces, to strengthen their defenses along the Lung-hai Railway and elsewhere, and to inspire the Chinese armies anew with a spirit of dogged determination to fight to the last inch and to inflame their patriotism for China, their hatred for Japan, to a fever pitch that reeks not of the consequences.

Re-formed Chinese A Different Enemy.

THE INEVITABLE result was that when Japan renewed its campaign it did not encounter the "paper soldiers" of late November and early December, but was brought face to face with a foe quite worthy of the best steel of the Samurai sword. Troops that Japan had withdrawn to the homeland as no longer necessary are being hastily replaced by new and fresh soldiers, and first line reservists are rushed to the front. Previously, most of the men called to the colors had been from the second and third lines, just as most of the war equipment sent to China was antiquated save for airplanes and part of the heavy artillery.

This change now to better soldiers and to better equipment is due to two reasons: Japan realizes that this is no longer a left-handed but a two-handed war, and Japan feels that Soviet Russia, because of internal conditions and because of recent international realignments in Europe, is no longer likely to launch an attack on the empire for some time to come.

"THE GENERALISSIMO."

Suchow Declared Key To Strategy Of Dai Nippon.

Moscow. For the time being, both hands can be used in China, and the best information obtainable in a land where the keeping of military secrets is a rite and a fetish is that five new divisions, two from Manchukuo and three from Japan proper, have been rushed to the Suchow front during the past month.

This city of Suchow, where the east-west Lung-hai and the north-south Tsin-pu railways cross, is the key to the eastern part of China at present. Until that is captured by Japan, occupied North China and occupied Central China cannot be united, as their borders do not touch. Until that is captured, there is almost no chance of a Japanese advance upon Hankow and the dislodging of Chiang Kai-shek from that great city, whence he would undoubtedly flee farther into China's vast interior provinces. Until that is done, Japan can have no hope of making peace at anything like its own terms.

Suchow is the key to the present phase of the Sino-Japanese hostilities, but it is far from being the key to the end of the war. It is the next and absolutely essential step in Japan's strategy, and Japan not only has been marking time on the Suchow front for some months past but has actually suffered acute reverses and enormous casualties in contrast to those earlier in the struggle.

The Tokyo government sees to it that neither press nor public knows how great these casualties are, but when vessel after vessel arrives in Tokyo Bay each carrying a thousand and more square white boxes, wrapped in plain white cloth and containing the ashes of what was once a Japanese soldier, the people of Japan know without the aid of newspapers that all is not going well in China and that Suchow is not yet a Japanese victory.

Japan Said Ready For "Honorable" Peace.

THERE CAN BE no doubt that Japan would gladly conclude peace at any moment if it were a peace giving this country complete dominance, although not necessarily officially so, of all of China north of the Yellow River, and a peace that caused no material loss of prestige, dignity and honor, all of which come under the Oriental term of "face." This would seem to be impossible at present.

The premier and the government have committed themselves time and again to the slogan that they will never deal with the Chiang Kai-shek regime. So emphatic and so frequent have been these utterances that the ancient Roman orator, Cato, and his cry of "Carthago delenda est!" cannot but spring to mind. Many Japanese now realize that to announce such a policy was a serious mistake, but they dare not say so openly and certainly not for quotation.

To do so might well cost them their lives at the hands of some young Japanese fanatic. But, they point out in private and confidential conversation, if Japan does not deal with Chiang Kai-shek there is no one else to deal with. And, they continue, if Chiang should be killed or collapse, if his power with his own people should be destroyed, it would prove disastrous for Japan itself. China might then be expected to relapse into a warring chaos of numerous ambitious generals and political leaders, a chaos with which it would be hopeless to deal and which would be a constant menace to peace and order in the Far East and so to Japan's ambitious plans for developing the Chinese republic economically to the very best advantage of the Japanese empire.

The die having been cast, Tokyo is helpless in finding any way out of its dilemma now except to make a harder drive than ever for "bringing China to her knees," as Premier Prince Konoye shocked the world by stating months ago. Not the general staff, not the war office, the military commanders in the field nor the more moderate civilian elements in the government see any alternative than a determined and unrelenting drive against Chiang Kan-shek and his loyal supporters.

Seemingly they fail to realize that in so doing they are strengthening the generalissimo. While he is weakened to some extent by the loss of men and war materiel on the field of battle, he is immeasurably strengthened in the support of unwavering loyalty given him by the Chinese populace by the rapidly growing partiotism among a people whom a decade ago scare knew the definition of that term which has now become one of the strongest motive forces China has known during its 40 centuries of history.

Three-Month Delay At Suchow Significant.

WHETHER Japan can accomplish this gargantuan objective remains in the realm of prophecy and speculation, and it is no business of the working newspaperman to indulge in either. Such pastimes must be left to the professional soothsayer and the propagandists, official and unofficial, of China and Japan, and perhaps of other lands as well.

After having conducted a major offensive against the Lunghai Railway with the junction city of Suchow as the center for nearly three months past, Japan has failed to gain that objective and has actually lost some ground and an untold number of lives as this is written. As a consequence, thousand upon thousand more Japanese soldiers, many of them the flower of the army, have been rushed to the front, and a major offensive on a still greater scale is expected before the month of May draws to a close.

After having held the Japanese at bay along this line for so long, there is no indication of a weakening of Chinese morale, and the sinews of war are still holding out. Moreover, the perennial floods that make of the Yellow and the Yangtze River valleys great lakes and vast marshes are near at hand, and with their coming Japan's superiority in mechanized equipment will be of little value.

Chinchilla Farm Planned.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 22.—Final plans are developing for the establishment of a chinchilla farm near New Market which will be the first, and perhaps the only one which has ever been tried in the East. A pair of the animals cost $3,200.

To Curb Crime

Registration Of Small Arms.

IF FEDERAL legislation now pending in Congress is enacted into law, it will provide more effective control of the traffic in firearms which can be concealed upon the person. It is of such importance that it should receive more extensive public attention and support.

Last summer a survey was made of the laws and regulations relating to the manufacture, sale, purchase, possession and carrying of firearms, not only in the United States and Canada and Great Britain, but also in the leading countries of Continental Europe, and a paper was presented containing the results of this survey, on behalf of the Department of Justice, at the Second International Congress of Comparative Law at The Hague in August. This comparative study disclosed that the United States is the only civilized country which tolerates the indiscriminate sale of firearms to criminals, minors and mental defectives, in contravention of laws which have been passed in some of the States to restrict such indiscriminate traffic.

The problem of firearms control in the United States is rendered more difficult than in other countries because while in other countries the control is vested in a centralized government, in this country there are forty-eight sovereignties, each having the primary responsibility, in the exercise of the police power, of regulating the traffic in and possession of firearms within their respective territories.

* * * *

THE STATE of New York has been foremost in promoting legislation to effect adequate supervision and control, but no single State can effectively meet the situation without the aid of the Federal Government. Attorney General Cummings early recognized the obligation upon the Federal Government to aid the States in meeting the menace of this indiscriminate traffic in deadly weapons, and soon after he became the head of the Department of Justice he introduced in Congress a bill to provide for the registration of all firearms which can be concealed upon the person. Unfortunately, pistols and revolvers were excluded from the bill before its passage, so that its operation was limited to machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, sawed-off rifles, and silencers. But even with this limitation, the law, known as the national firearms act, has shown the value of this method of firearms control, for under its provisions more than 20,000 machine guns and submachine guns have been registered, and it has resulted in substantially putting an end to the sale of machine guns to the public and restricting the sale to law-enforcement officers and others charged with official duties which require the use of these weapons.

* * * *

OPPOSITION has come mainly from sportsmen under the mistaken belief that the present bill covers all firearms, including rifles and shotguns, which are used in hunting and target practice. But the Attorney General, in the present legislation, has intentionally excluded shotguns and rifles, because the objective is to stop the indiscriminate traffic in pistols and revolvers, which are the main reliance of the underworld.

A second bill, sponsored by the Department of Justice, will put an end to the indiscriminate sale of pistols and revolvers by mail-order houses and dealers in firearms to unknown and unidentified purchasers.

If an insistent public demand is made upon Congress for favorable action on the pending bills, there is every prospect that there is yet time to secure their enactment into law during the present session of Congress.

Tell me that my stance is bad
And say I grip too much;
Say my backswing's pretty sad
And that I lack the touch;
Tell me that my drive's a laugh
And that my swing's too flat,
But skip me with the photograph—
I just can't stand for that.

II.

Be as candid as you please
And say I have no form;
Pull that old "You're pressing" wheeze
And make your comment warm;
Tell me that I finish wrong,
(And knock the way I start),
But bring a movie man along?
Hey, feller, have a heart!

III.

Bark, "Your pivot is a mess"
And yell, "You don't go through!"
Call me lousy; I confess
My good points they are few;
Make your criticism mean
And all your cracks unkind—
But show my golf style on a screen?
Now, lissen . . . Never mind!

IV.

Say I'm awful on the greens
And that I tend to lunge;
Say I don't know what it means
To swing without a plunge;
Say my backswing's full of halts—
As jerky as can be—
But have the movies show my faults?
Say, mister, not for me!

V.

Tell me that my wrists are stiff
And that I rhythm lack;
Say that when the ball I whiff
I have a ramrod back;
Name my bad points, one by one,
Oh, I can take it, sir,
But put them on the screen, my son?
Now listen! As you were!

The Federal Diary

Notes

H. R. 6636, which makes Armistice Day a legal holiday, has been signed by the President; and on this account Federal workers get an entire week-end off this year. Armistice Day, November 11, falls on a Friday, making possible a good stretch from duty . . .

The politicians who long have shouted "To the Victor Belongs the Spoils" may now hear the taxpaying public shouting "Patronage Rights are Public Wrongs." This was judged the best merit system slogan offered to the National Civil Service Reform League, in its contest, by three advertising experts who acted as judges. They gave honorable mention to a slogan submitted by Robert Bicknell, of Washington. His offering was "Public Office is a Privilege, Not a Political Prize."

The judges looked over more than 1,000 slogans, sent in from almost every State in the Union. Among suggestions were: "Spare the Exams and Get in the Hams," "Don't Can Those Who Can," "What! No Pork?" "Civil Service Is the Stuff; Let's All Spoil the Spoilsman's Bluff." George E. Dimmick, of Rome, N. Y., submitted the winning slogan and got $50.

But it hasn't entirely suited the donor of the prize, Charles G. Morris, of New Haven, Conn., a member of the N.C.S.R.L. executive committee. His comment: "The winning slogan is concise and true, but it still lacks the perfect touch, for it does not rouse the bearer to action * * * The perfect slogan for the merit system has not yet been found."

Government employes will be called on this week to help commemorate the life of Amelia Earhart in a movement that has the indorsement of Federal officials. To commemorate her pioneer spirit the Amelia Earhart Foundation has designated May 22-29 as Amelia Earhart Week, and will seek to raise $500,000 to be set up as a fund for post-graduate scholarships to be granted in the famous flyer's name. Washington sponsors conferred last week with all Cabinet officers regarding promotion of the memorial drive throughout the departments—and received a cordial response. The local foundation committee, headed by Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Pennsylvania Senator, will meet today to launch the fund-raising drive . . .

The District of Columbia Department, American Federation of Government Employes, is sponsoring a trip to Atlantic City, Philadelphia and New York for the Decoration Day period. You can get details from C. F. Orton or from the national headquarters of the organization . . . Social Security Lodge, 424, A. F. G. E., was host the other night to the Baltimore Social Security Bowling League at a stag party in Baltimore. Eighty-four members of the Bowling League and the administrative staff of the Baltimore records office attended . . . Among recent visitors to the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Military Park were 69 Marine Corps officers from Quantico. These officers are students at the Quantico Marine Corps School and are studying the battle of Chancellorsville under Maj. David Rowan Nimmer. They were all full of praise of work the National Park Service is doing on the historic site . . .

The Maryland State-District of Columbia Federation of Labor opens sessions at Frederick, Md., today. Adjournment is scheduled for late Wednesday. There is no indication that the federation will discuss any problems of especial interest to Federal employes. However, a number of A. F. G. E. lodges are affiliated with the State federation and it is likely they will have some resolutions to offer on one subject or another . . .

At the United Office and Professional Workers of America convention here the other day, we heard the American Federation of Labor rather laughed at for neglecting any attempt at organizing the so-called white-collar group of workers. Today we see from the Government Standard, A. F. G. E. official publication, that an "intensive effort on the part of the American Federation of Labor (to) organize white-collar workers is forecast from A. F. of L. headquarters."

"The American Federation of Labor is engaged in an intensive organizing drive among white-collar workers employed in private industry," according to Frank Weikel, president, American Federation of Office Employes International Council. There are now affiliated with the A. F. of L. 75 local unions of this class of wage earners, he disclosed—which indicates that the UOPWA hasn't actually got the field sewed up . . .

Move to Conserve Phosphates Based On Military Use

By the Associated Press.

Informed persons yesterday said the military importance of phosphorus was a factor in the Administration's concern over conservation of America's phosphate rock resources.

Agents of several foreign powers have visited the Tennessee Valley area and sites of other American deposits, presumably with a view to making purchases in this country, these persons said. Phosphorus is used in making incendiary bombs, flame-throwing ammunition and smoke screens.

Both for reasons of preparedness and to prevent important supplies from being stored abroad, it was said, the Administration was considering means of checking exports. Most of the important deposits of phosphate rock are in the United States and Russia.

Week Set to Find Jobs for Veterans

Churches, service organizations and labor bodies will join in a concerted drive this week to find work for unemployed former service men. "Veterans' Employment Week," in accordance with a proclamation by the District Commissioners, opened yesterday.

Sponsoring organizations, including the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the United Spanish War Veterans, have issued an appeal to employers and interested citizens to offer permanent jobs to veterans more than 40 years of age, now at the peak of their usefulness.

Co-operating with the veterans' organizations is the D. C. Employment Center, where every jobless veteran is registered.

A committee representing the veterans includes Oscar G. Jones, of the U. S. Employment Service; John M. Farner, of the United Spanish War Veterans; John T. Chedester, of the Disabled American Veterans; Capt. Oscar W. Hollingsworth, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and D. G. Stanley, of the American Legion.

Senate Unit Votes $375,000,000 Fund For Flood Control

By the Associated Press.

Legislation authorizing $375,000,000 in flood control construction in the next five years was approved by the Senate Commerce Committee Saturday.

Chairman Copeland (Democrat), New York, disclosed immediately that determined efforts would be made to provide money this year for a start on the program. The legislation, already approved by the House, carries no funds.

Meanwhile, informed persons said the War Department had submitted to the Public Works Administration at the request of Senators a list of waterway projects that could be undertaken by Army engineers with PWA funds. Money for PWA is provided in the Administration's pending work-relief bill.

Sunny Sunday Brings Two Garden Parties

By Elizabeth Ford.

Mark off in the engagement book another Sunday afternoon of perpetual motion for the folks who receive cards to all the parties on the schedule. There ware plenty of them going on and at least two of them with a garden in Georgetown as setting, which is as it should be now that the sun has finally decided to shine on Washington.

First of all there was William Taylor's fete given to warm up his new-old house, the one he has restored to quaintness on Twenty-eighth street. It started out by being one of these stern Chester A. Arthur residences with lots of character but no charm. Now it has character and charm plus and looks like the real Georgian article. Guests who arrived from 5:30 and on had a chance to admire their host's collection of modern paintings . . . among them the Renoir self-portrait in the drawnig room. Out of doors, their admiration increased as they wandered about his garden, with its formal box hedges and its fountain.

Mrs. Egbert Howard, of Philadelphia, was her brother's hostess. Others who served on his welcoming committee were Mrs. Lammot Belin, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Charles Hofer and Mrs. Ingalls Sard. A lot of those who attended the Thomases' dance on Saturday evening turned out for the Taylor affair. One look at Mrs. Byron C. Foy, of New York, in her smart spring-like outfit was enough to convince anybody that her listing in the Decalogue of Best-Dressed Women is no more than her just due.

• • • •

Yes, Miss Ann Carroll Meem and Miss Eleanor Eastbourne Meem are still dressing alike. At the party yesterday afternoon which the latter gave for the former and the former's fiance, Edward Beale McLean, jr., they were their usual attractive selves in gay little frocks of cream colored crepe set off with black suede belts. Miss Evalyn Washington McLean wore a figured print dress.

The younger set took over the Meem house on Thirty-fourth street for the biggest event of the ingenue season. Among the many, many present were Miss Angelica Lloyd, Miss Stellita Stapleton, who will give a dinner dance for Miss Meem and Mr. McLean this evening; Jock McLean and his bride; John R. Merriam, jr., Miss Margot Garrett and her fiance, Luis Mariano Zuberbuhler; Miss Mary Wilson, Larry Baker, Igor Cassini, Miss Julia Zimmerman, Miss Marta and Miss Rebecca Trucco, Arthur Vandenberg, Charles van der Straten-Ponthoz, and Mr. and Mrs. Jean de Sibour.

Back to Georgetown—to 3133 O street—for the get-together given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward McElhiney Lewis. The invitations had read, "Come around to our garden party—19 by 20 feet—three rosebushes."

It turned out that the Lewises were unduly modest for a part of town that devotes every extra square inch to its horticultural hobbies. Nothing could have been nicer than their grand collection of rambler roses, nor more attractive than the brick house itself with its blue shutters.

Drinks were served, frosty cool, in the garden and living room and as if that wasn't enough, the intrepid souls—it's wonderful how many intrepid souls there are at a specially nice party—accepted the dare to descend a narrow little stairway to what the Lewises call "The Black Hole of Calcutta," but which every guest present decided was the cleverest recreation room they had seen in a long time.

Mrs. Lewis was assisted by her mother, Mrs. William Richardson, and Miss Ellen Boyd. Present to answer the roll call were Mr. and Mrs. John O'Connell (just as well known as Doris Fleeson); Mr. and Mrs. Ray Tucker, Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, Edward Gableman, Miss Hazel Edgar, Mrs. Lyle C. Wilson, Mrs. Esther van Wagon Tufty and many others.

Also on board were Miss Marguerite Le Hand and Miss Elizabeth Henderson.

Election Today By Pen Women

The District of Columbia Branch of National League of American Pen Women will have its annual meeting and election of officers tonight at its studio in Grafton Hotel. Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, who has served for the past year as first vice president, is slated to succeed Miss Marguerite Merigold as president.

Miss Merigold is retiring after seven years in office for the District branch. She served first as registrar then as recording secretary, second vice president, first vice president, and finally as president. Miss Merigold, who will preside at the meeting tonight, has just returned from a trip through Pennsylvania, sponsored by the State publicity commission, the Automobile Association, and Hotel Association. She was one of a group of writers entertained on the tour, which was conducted by Orso Fitzman, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania State publicity commission.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE first hostess on whom the sun shone all last week was Mrs. Higginson Rogers. The weather cleared just in time to allow her to give her cocktail party in the garden on Saturday afternoon before the terrific thunderstorm that evening.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mrs. Rogers, who originally comes from Boston via Chicago, has one of the most charming small houses in Georgetown. The long drawing room on the second floor opens through French doors onto a terrace and a narrow garden surrounded by a brick wall. In one corner of the garden is her "menagerie," a large collection of dogs, giving the place a zoo-like atmosphere.

• • • •

A NUMBER of out-of-town guests who came down for Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. William Thomas' dance that evening were present at Mrs. Rogers' party. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grimes, of New York, who formerly resided here in the house the James Roosevelts now have, spent the week-end with Mrs. Rogers, as did Bradley Nash, also of Manhattan, and once here with the New Deal. At the party Mrs. Grimes wore a black frock and a very smart hat, black, trimmed with yellow and with a heavy veil tying under the chin.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Leonard, of New York, got off the train just in time for the cocktail party. Guests of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Thomas over the week-end, the Leonards both remarked that Washington was absolutely their favorite city to visit, because of the gayety and informality of our city.

• • • •

THE HOSTESS wore a street-length print frock, blue and very simple, and no stockings, which is something you can get away with in a Georgetown garden if nowhere else.

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, wearing a gray tailleur, was an early arrival, having just returned from attending the late Edward Stotesbury's funeral. Mr. Stotesbury was a close friend of Mr. and Mrs. Robert, who frequently visited him and his wife both at Palm Beach and in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, wearing a navy blue sheer frock and a hat trimmed with daisies, chatted for a while with Clarence Hewes. Others there were Keith Officer, Miss Rebecca Wellington, wearing a yellow silk sports frock and no hat; Ralph Snowden Hill, a neighbor of Mrs. Rogers; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark, Comdr. John Magruder, George Howe, Mrs. Pearsons Rust, in a dark red frock; Lady Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Maxfield Dunlap and Anthony de Balasy.

• • • •

GLOWING healthily with a Bermuda suntan, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Swezey are back from their honeymoon. She is the former Miss Helen Brereton and is the daughter of Commander and Mrs. William D. Brereton. During the summer the Swezeys will occupy the house of Miss Cecil Jones, president of the Junior League. Miss Jones will spend the warm months as usual on her farm in Maine, which she manages completely and efficiently.

• • • •

MR. AND MRS. Henry Varnum Poor and Miss Dorothea Villard, daughter of Oswald Garrison Villard, will be honor guests at a cocktail party to be given tomorrow afternoon by Miss Eleanor Fahey, daughter of the chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation and Mrs. John Fahey. Mrs. Poor, whose husband is in the State Department, knew her hostess when both had jobs in Geneva, Miss Fahey with the International Labor Office, several years ago . . . Recently staying with Miss Fahey were Mr. and Mrs. Guy Currier. She was the former Deborah Lippincott, of Philadelphia, and lived here before her marriage. They have just come back from ten months in Tobago, a romantic island in the Lesser Antilles group which sounds like an ideal place to get away from it all. A house with a view can be had for 6 dollars a month, and the only fly in the ointment is the ice problem. Ice has to be fetched daily from the other end of the island, and the native servants can't get used to the idea of putting food in the icebox. They want to put it anywhere else but.

Dita Seiden Wed To Dr. Golden

Miss Dita Seiden and Dr. Benjamin Golden, of this city, were married yesterday in Kansas City, Mo., by Rabbi Samuel Mayerberg at the Hotel Bellerive.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Seiden, of Kansas City, was in a floor-length dress of white organza, heavily embroidered with white flowers. She carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The ushers were Abraham Golden, of Stamford, Conn., brother of the bridegroom, and Rudolf Seiden, Egan Seiden and Ernest Seiden, of Kansas City, brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Dunbar Slated To Attend Meeting Of Women's Clubs

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, newly-elected president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, first vice president; Mrs. Harry L. Harcum, president of the Maryland Federation, will be guests of honor at the annual meeting of the Prince Georgs County Federation at Maryland University tomorrow. Past State presidents and presidents of the districts are expected also.

Merrick, Woman's Club of Melwood District; second vice president, Mrs. Henry Breckbill, Progress Club of College Park; recording secretary, Mrs. Harry T. Jenkins, Suitland Homemakers' Club; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. B. Gahan, Woman's Community Club of Berwyn; treasurer, Mrs. Albert Craig, Woman's Club of Cottage City. The polls will be open from 4 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Mrs. Chandler Will Be Feted

Mrs. Frank E. Kaufman will give a luncheon today in honor of Mrs. Webb R. Chandler, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., the house guest of Mrs. Tomas Cajigas. The luncheon will take place at the Shoreham Hotel and will be followed by bridge in Mrs. Kaufman's garden in Chevy Chase.

Other guests of honor will be Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the Senator from Missouri, and Mrs. John J. Cochran, wife of the Representative from Missouri.

Among others to be present are Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Charles J. Wright, Mrs. W. R. Winslow, of Norbeck, Md.; Mrs. Francis H. Fannon, of Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. Robert E. Freer and Mrs. E. F. Koss.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

How to Conquer Shyness and Make Friends With Certain Boy, Asks Girl Who's Never Had a Beau.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 21, living in the country, and have never had a beau. In my teens, my parents wouldn't hear of it; said it would be time enough when I was out of school, but I have been out of school for four years now, and still have no boy friends. However, about two months ago I met a certain boy at a party and liked him very much, but when I meet him on the street and he starts a conversation I don't know how to keep it going. I seem to be very bashful and just can't overcome it.

• • • •

This boy is a friend of a boy cousin of mine, and is always questioning my cousin about me, and has said he should like to make a date. But when my cousin tells me about this, I blush and get so embarrassed I make a fool of myself. To cover up, I reply that I don't want a date with him and wouldn't be seen with him, but the truth is, I would like very much to go out with him. Please tell me how to control my bashfulness and how to go about making friends with this boy.

BASHFUL.

• • • •

DEAR BASHFUL: There is only one cure for your particular brand of self-consciousness, and that is to accustom yourself, and your little world, to the idea of your having a beau. Just now you are being coy, with an almost Victorian brand of spinsterish coyness, and that as the direct result of your parents' sadly mistaken refusal to permit you to go with boys in your teens. The longer you postpone the business of securing a beau, the more wretched will become your self-conscious attitude toward men, and particularly toward such men as may chance to pay you any interested notice.

• • • •

When you meet the boy on the street, ask him how's he been, and what's he been doing, and has he seen John (your cousin) lately, and what's he planning for excitement this summer—is he going away for a vacation? Has he been doing any swimming? etc. Talk about his job, if he has one; ask him if he's seen this week's picture at the local movie house; talk about the one you've seen most recently, or the one you liked best of all those you've seen the past year.

• • • •

Tell him some amusing anecdote about some neighbor or friend you both know (or some tragic happening, or just some inconsequential gossip, as the case may be); bring the conversation around to some event that is scheduled to take place in the near future and ask him if he's expecting to go; ask him how he likes your new dress or hat, or purse or bracelet; tell him something complimentary you've heard someone (your cousin, for instance), say about him, and so on, and so on. There's simply no end of things to talk about, if you'll just keep your head and use your wits. You can always chatter about things you know him to be interested in—his work, his hobbies, his plans for the future, etc., etc.

• • • •

And for heaven's sake stop telling your cousin you wouldn't be seen with this boy. Tell him, instead, that you think he's the nicest boy you've seen in years; that you think he would be great fun; that you certainly would consider a "date" with him, and for him to get busy and fix it up. A girl isn't being bold and unmaidenly in saying such things; she's just being twentieth century matter-of-fact, straightforward and above board.

• • • •

The girl who had a dozen beaux wouldn't hesitate to say that much, or more, about some youth who had attracted her fancy; so why should you, who have no beau, hesitate to admit you would very much like to have one? The answer, of course, is that you are trying to keep up a miserable pretense of not being interested in men, and in so doing you are fooling no one but yourself, and possibly your parents, and I daresay, if the truth were known, they themselves are beginning to worry a bit about your old-maidish tendencies.

• • • •

It's no disgrace to be interested in the opposite sex; in fact, it's a very admirable and wholesome reaction, and my advice to you, in this instance, is to have done with foolish blushing and bridling, and candidly admit your interest in this boy, while doing everything in your power to encourage his interest in you.

Question of Etiquette.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last year I was engaged to a fine boy, but broke the engagement when I found I didn't love him enough to marry him. He was much hurt, but his pride more than his heart, I think. Early this year I heard he was in love again, and planning to be married, so I wrote him a little note saying how glad I was to learn of his happiness. I didn't expect a reply; there was no reason to, and I didn't receive one. However, I have just received an announcement of the marriage and the envelope bore the return address of the couple. I am wondering if an acknowledgment is in order—and should it be a gift or a note? Or should I just ignore it?

A. W.

• • • •

DEAR A. W.: It would be churlish to ignore the announcement entirely, particularly so in view of your former relationship with the bridegroom. If you would give a letter-perfect performance, send a wedding gift to the couple, addressed to the bride, at her new home address. No accompanying note is necessary. You may inclose your calling card merely, or inscribe on it a few handwritten words of conventional felicitation.

M. H.

Sports Costumes in Classic Theme

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 22.

THERE'LL BE a new Ophelia in town next fall, to the uncut, four-and-a-half-hour "Hamlet" of Maurice Evans, the mighty Britisher who smote us all hip and thigh with his "Richard II"—also by a chap named Shakespeare. And it is very possible that the daft maiden will be played by Martha Scott, official dramatic find and wonder girl of our dying theatrical season.

ALICE HUGHES

Every year brings one of those fresh and lovely kids. Katherine Locke was last season's. Already I've noted Martha here, as one of three vivid kids living in a "Stage Door" set-up at 2 Beekman place, all for one, one for all. Martha has bowled us all over as the girl bride in Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," Pulitzer Prize winner—and, Ophelia or no, Scotty must and will be widely known.

Seems she was born in the fine old town of Jamesport, Mo.—population 834, not counting canines and drifters—and got the footlight yen by falling in love with the gorgeous president of her high school class. She wanted to play opposite him in the senior play more than anything in the world, but scarlet fever cut Martha down and busted her little heart. She managed to get well in time to do a specially written prologue, though, and another young actress was on her way!

Followed the usual slavery, only endured by girls with the real trouper heart. Four years of bits at the Detroit Civic Theater, once the famous Bonstelle stock, teacher of such as Kit Cornell and others. Next, straw-hat summer theaters in New England, and she was ready for the big time—and now is ready for greater glory.

Hollywood some day, maybe. "But the films would have a tough time," she tells me. "Friends say I look like Bette Davis from the right, Janet Gaynor from the left, Olivia de Havilland head-on." Three chances instead of one. Good luck, Martha!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our children have been kicking and yowling because there's no place for them in the local nightclubs, but that has been fixed and history is on the make. Our great International Casino has launched a brilliant and exciting ice-skating floor show for the summer—and some genius decided on the idea of special Saturday matinees for the tots. Great notion! Of course, pink ice cream and frosted cookies will be the only refreshment—and if some 7-year-old playboy demands champagne, he will be thrown headlong into Times Square by the 6-foot bouncer! Come to Broadway, girls, and bring the kiddies! . . .

Callander has its Dionnes, but we still brag about our cute and husky Kasper Quadruplets, just over the Hudson in Jersey. They've just celebrated their second birthday, with cakes and toys and a speech by their official godfather and guardian, Mayor Turner, of Passaic. Three of them have passed the 30-pound mark. Each weighed three pounds at birth. A roguish quartet! . . .

Lin Root, movie writer and playmaker, is in town for a long visit, and last week-end I learned her cute makeup trick, which she picked up from the stars. She makes a little V on each cheekbone with her lipstick—then rubs them in with drops of fragrant oil. All of which guarantees matching cheeks and lips. How's for that?

Black, White Dominate In New Evening Gowns

Paris (U.P.)—Black and white dominate as colors for evening in the first dresses of the season. Mainbocher shows a gown with the corsage in night black organza, tightly molded to the body, sharply contrasting with the wide skirt in white organza. Embroidery in black and white flowers joins the two parts.

At the Louvre Museum gala the other night for the exhibition of English painting a countess wore a lovely gown draped in front with red velvet with a long cape and a long ostrich feather in her hair of the same color, reminding of Gainsborough.

White Is Rage This Summer in Women's Wear

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

IT'S going to be a white summer! Chalk white clothes for daytime, evening and sports, were in the lead at two important fashion shows last Saturday afternoon—one at the Congressional Country Club, the other at the Shoreham Hotel. Very few costumes were all white, the popular trend being white with dashes of gay or dark color. Another style note, of special interest to Washington women, is the return of the sun-back dress, topped by a fitted jacket or bolero; the majority of these were deep-toned prints, in cotton or rayon. Chiffon for day wear was exploited in lovely printed patterns and solid colors—black, navy, brown; these were made with low V or square necklines and full skirts.

The huge straw cartwheel has taken over the rule of the smaller and be-veiled hat. At both fashion shows, they were much in evidence, to accompany every type of costume from beach, through casual daytime and formal garden parties. Because of the high crowns and shaped brims of many of the latest wide-brimmed hats, they are adaptable to practically all women—short and tall. Dirndls in novelty cottons, often topped with brief boleros appeared in numerous color combinations and promise to be very popular as the season advances. Jackets complementing either one-piece or suspender dresses and made of the dress material, were also much to the fore.

In evening clothes, the portrait stylings have the fashion spotlight, with various tones of blue much in evidence. These were made of numerous effective materials—chiffon, lace, net, marquisette, mouseline, dotted Swiss organza, and novelty cottons. Petal pink, white and black vied with the blue tones, with white leading at the Saturday showings. In keeping with the quaint stylings of the evening gowns were the upswept coiffures accented with clever flower arrangements. Outstanding at both shows was the printed sandal, for both day and evening wear; they add a smart dash to a costume if discreetly chosen.

The show at the Shoreham was an All-American affair, but the one at the Congressional Country Club combined creations of both Paris and American designers, with such important names as Schiaparelli, Chanel Lelong, Vionnet. This fashion presentation concluded with an all-white wedding party; the bride in a smartly styled gown of brocaded silk crepe with long veil and train and carrying a nosegay bouquet of valley lilies. The two bridesmaids wore white net picture frocks and tiny hats of horsehair with velvet flower crowns, in red and purple; tiny red and purple nosegay bouquets were tied to the left wrist with narrow velvet ribbons which hung almost to the hems of the gowns.

Leather Trims.

Paris (U.P.)—Leather of all kinds is used extensively in trimming spring suits. Francevramant uses quantities of snakeskin on her suits. At Lanvin leather is worked into colorful leaves and other designs to mark the waistlines of her suits. Other houses make frogs, "ribs," flower applique, amusing buttons and other leather forms to trim wool suits and dresses.

Motor Millennium.

A FAR-REACHING reform of motorists and motoring is to be the next project of the Do Something About It League, according to Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, the intrepid leader of the organization.

Undismayed by the failure of laws, traffic codes and policemen to meet the automobile problem, Mrs. DeGoofey insists she will yet make motoring a civilized pursuit.

"You must remember," she said, "that our league numbers 10,788,431 dauntless women, any one of whom could, if necessary, go on a rampage that would make men officials, especially Congressmen, take to the woods. Moreover, there are a lot of motor atrocities that cannot be reached by law, and it is on those that we shall first concentrate."

"For instance, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Well, first of all, this thing of talking on motor rides. You go out to enjoy the scenery and the air and there is always some pest along who insists on being chatty. He or she—it's generally a she—shouts back and forth to you from the front or back seat and you have to strain your ears and voice until you go home a nervous wreck.

"Now we are going to remedy that by neat little signs saying 'SILENCE PLEASE' to be placed in all motor cars. If that doesn't work we will have large buttons made for persons who like quiet motoring. These buttons will bear the words, 'I AM DEAF AND DUMB.'"

"Are you planning any inventions, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Yes indeed. We are working on an umbrella device for the use of persons who feel that rumble seats are designed only for necking displays."

"Then your league is opposed to necking?"

"Not at all. Only we feel that it is frequently embarrassing for the motorists behind to receive dirty looks from neckers when they have no choice but to look at them. Another invention we plan is a little automatic sign that can be unfurled out of a small tripod by pedestrians when motorists honk insultingly at them. It will bear something like 'GO JUMP IN THE LAKE!'—or even stronger language. We feel such a sign will go a long way toward relieving the pent-up feelings of the pedestrians and keep them from developing inferiority complexes."

"What else do you have in mind, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Well, we are petitioning the motorcar manufacturers to devise some motor doors that will actually open and shut—especially shut. We find that divorce courts are being filled with women who have received harsh words from husbands over their failure to close motorcar doors securely. Moreover, we are perfecting some loading devices that will enable women with bundles or babies to board motorcars without making spectacles of themselves. We are also thinking of substituting musical chimes for the insulting motor horns that juvenile-minded motorists honk constantly. And we will have some soundproof earmuffs for men or women whose mates are back seat drivers."

"Are you planning any laws, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Well, we hope to do something drastic about motorists who scare you out of your wits by honking greetings at you on the street, also boors who honk for you in front of your house and motorists who then arrive on a rainy night to answer to take you somewhere and nounce that the car is parked two blocks away. Chummy people who insist on your straddling the brakes so you can all be together on the front seat will be summarily dealt with, as will also those men who are always charging that the rotter driver ahead is a woman."

"When will your campaign start, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Right away . . . that is, just as soon as I get back from . . . well, I've got a little business down at the police court."

"The police court?"

"Yes, I've got to straighten out a little matter about a collision—you see, it was the other driver's fault . . ."

Keeping Calories Down Essential After Diet Course Is Ended.

By Ida Jean Kain.

SOME CYNIC (it was a man, you might know!) said that going on a diet was like going on the water wagon.

"Once off the diet," he went on accusingly, "the reducer is bent on breaking her resolutions with all possible speed. And the first thing she knows, she is right back where she started."

Did he mean you?

Of course, there is cause for celebration when your weight is back to normal. And as soon as you get nice and slim there is no law against eating as you please—but you will never stay slim that way. You do not have to stay on the same old diet, but you do have to keep your new food habits.

Dieting means cutting your calorie intake until you draw on stored fat for energy. To keep slim you need only hold the calories down to the number you can use in energy, with none left over to make fat.

Weight Will Be Fixed.

You can have one-third more calories on a keeping slim program than on your diet, and I can make you a promise: If you will exercise discretion for a period of one year, your weight worries are permanently over. By that time you will have established a lower weight level. Your weight and habits will be fairly fixed, and even though you may occasionally overindulge, you will have relief to find that the scales do not fluctuate as readily.

Continue to be guided by the daily menus given in this column. To these menus you may add from 200 to 600 calories, depending on your activity. Make the calorie increase a gradual one, however, until you are using the exact number of calories you require.

At that point your calorie judgment should be fairly sound. You will be able to change the menus and to adjust the calories easily to maintain the balance between intake and outgo of energy. When this balance is sustained you neither gain nor lose weight. You stay thin.

You can never trust your appetite for, as you know by experience, your appetite grows enormously with a little overfeeding. It is a good slimming rule to always stop eating before you reach the satiation point. Get up from the table feeling as if you would like a little more food, and ten minutes later you will have forgotten all about it. That is how far you can trust your appetite!

It will be worth while for this one year to keep a close watch on the scales. A three-pound advance in weight is the signal for an immediate cut in calories, and you should drop back to the 1,200-calorie-a-day limit until the indicator no longer wavers.

Once back to normal weight, don't break your resolutions with too much speed.

All this may sound ominous. Surprising as it may seem, you will not want to overeat as you once did and weight therefore is easily controlled.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

SOLONS' SALONS: For a long time a penny has lain on the big table in the House Ways and Means Committee room, placed there whimsically to test the greed—or absent-mindedness — of members, callers, witnesses.

The other day, when no one was looking, the penny vanished. Several bigshots are under suspicion.

For a few days the palaces of government were like Madison Square Garden during a free-for-all, with Wallace and Hughes exchanging jabs (stockyards); Hull and Welles shadow-boxing (Spanish embargo); Ickes and Welles in an exhibition bout on helium; Roper and Welles rabbit-punching about the foreign service. But as it grows warmer the warriors fall into a languor.

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING: White House Tommy Corcoran'd better get some sleep; he's graying prematurely . . . Admirers are urging a medal for the pantless gunner of the Panay—now that we've given medals to the Englishmen who brought him a pair of pants . . . President Roosevelt called a 55-year-old journalist "my dear boy"—sounds like paternalism.

One of the masterminds mobilized a flock of Government press agents the other day and made them listen to a lecture by a psychiatrist (specialist in mental ills), to make their handouts even more irresistible . . . (I hope this isn't a subtle dig at the press which prints 'em or the public which reads 'em!)

* * * *

An attendant at the great Washington Zoo has confided in me a peculiar observation: That each animal in the cages, no matter how fantastic in appearance, frequently sees its counterpart, a human with a strong resemblance, on the other side of the bars . . .

* * * *

There are, he says, two or three members of Congress who resemble the incredible mandrill, and a Treasury official who could almost pass for a twin brother of the little hybrid bear.

This attendant, a student of human nature, says he notices the resemblances are especially striking in profile, so he stands off to one side and watches.

Some official wives in Washington can't gain any weight, no matter how much they eat, because they worry so much about rank, etiquette, precedence . . .

Other wives don't so much worry about it as think it's cute; like the wife of a Western Representative who gave a big luncheon at an elegant hotel recently . . .

Most of her guests were wives of Senators and Congressmen, and she seated them carefully first in the order of their husbands' length of service and then in the order in which their States were admitted to the Union. This is strictly correct according to the book, but not all hostesses go to the bother.

"—greater love in the Capital."

Nowhere else is there (so far as I can see) so much mixed tennis played as in the Capital; mixed doubles, with a young man and young woman on each side, and even mixed singles, a boy against a girl . . . Greater friendship hath no woman, than that a man should play tennis with her . . . The town is dotted with scores of public tennis courts, and many of the players are young people determined to keep fit in spite of slaving for the Government. Much of the tennis is later followed by marriage.

PAJAMA PORTRAITS.

IRISH REBEL.

Latest of the rumors about Congressman Jerry O'Connell, the fighting Irishman from Butte, is that he plans secretly to make a speech in Boss Hague's fief at Jersey City from an airplane hovering over Journal Square equipped with a loud speaker . . . O'Connell has been vexing the White House with letters about Dictator Hague, which are turned over to the Attorney General . . . O'Connell's the son of a miner killed in a strike; he visited the Spanish front last year. Later Congressman O'Connell had something of a row with Cardinal O'Connell about the bombing of Barcelona . . . He is the youngest Congressman, and one of the noisiest; so far he has squared away at Mussolini, Hitler, Boss Hague, a cardinal and Senator Wheeler, whom he may oppose for the Senate in 1940.

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Some of the New Deal spokesmen might do well to imitate Prudence Shannon, of Steve Early's staff, who treats journalists with all the honors and courtesies of war . . . In some few Government offices it's always open season against newshawks—especially when the higher-ups are doing the shooting with a microphone. They say that one reason Ambassado Hugh Gibson is now out in the cold is that the White House thinks it was he who innocently tipped off the Japs that the U. S. wouldn't do much about the war in China; and thus the Brussels confab was wrecked.

78,636 Visit Parked Plane In Eight Days

JOSEPH PRICCI, cabinet maker, of 540 Irving street northwest, being congratulated by Miss Margaret O'Grady, stewardess, of Chicago, on winning a free trip.

Ignoring rain and heat, 78,636 sightseers filed through the American Airliner parked at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue in the eight days ended last midnight.

Happiest visitor of the week appeared in the line at 6:48 p. m. yesterday. He was Joseph Pricci, 34-year-old cabinet maker, of 540 Irving street northwest, whose street car ride turned into a free plane ride from Washington to Chicago and back.

Pricci's appearance brought the total visitors to 75,000 and won for him the prize. Pricci explained that he boarded a street car at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue "just for a ride."

Joined Crowd on Impulse.

At Fourteenth street he saw the plane and decided to join the crowd. As he reached the entrance, E. C. Taylor, airline employe, who has been checking the visitors through the week, asked Pricci his name.

"I haven't done anything" said Pricci.

"You've won the prize," answered Taylor.

Pricci gave his name and after that couldn't say very much, except that it would be his first plane ride. Also he was slightly worried about air sickness but declared that would not hold him back.

"It's the first time in my life I've won anything," he said. He was doubtful about when he would take the trip, but admitted he was happy over it.

For American airline officials who have been on duty from 8 a. m. to 12 p. m. daily the last visitor meant the close of a busy question-and-answer workout.

Few visitors passed through without at least one question—usually it was how they managed to land the plane at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania—and many wanted complete details of the ship's performance, prices of trips and the use of all the instruments in the pilot's cockpit.

Back in Air Today.

Among answers they received were: high speed, 212 miles an hour; normal cruising speed, 190; distance needed to land or take off, 1,200 feet; speed of landing and takeoff 70 miles an hour; gasoline load, 825 gallons; cruising radius, 1,500 to 2,000 miles; time from Washington to Los Angeles, 16 hours 45 minutes.

About how the plane reached the middle of Washington, the story was to be repeated in reverse early today. Airline officials said they would begin taking the wings off the plane at 2:30 a. m. They would be taken by truck to Washington Airport while the fuselage would be towed, tail first, by tractor.

The plane will take to the air tomorrow afternoon on the run to Newark.

Post Carrier, Wilson Student, 17, Missing

Howard E. Clark, jr., 17, Post carrier for three years, has been reported missing from his home, 3609 Quesada street northwest, since 7 p. m. Saturday.

Young Clark was described as 5 feet 10 inches tall with light brown hair and was said to be wearing gray trousers and a blue shirt. He is a student at Woodrow Wilson High School.

Trivia Lead To War, Fear Of LaGuardia

Says 'America Has Right to Declare Quarantine If Epidemic Spreads.'

America doesn't want war and it doesn't want to be isolated, "but if there is going to be an epidemic, America has a right to establish its own quarantine, Mayor Fiorello M. LaGuardia of New York declared here yesterday.

Mayor LaGuardia spoke before nearly 10,000 persons attending the eleventh annual "massing of colors" at the Washington Cathedral Amphitheater. More than 100 patriotic organizations participated in the services, sponsored by the District Chapter of the Military Order of the World War.

Warning that "at any moment Europe may be in another war, LaGuardia urged that America be watchful and careful, "so that we will not be dragged into another conflict."

"Fears Triviality.

"I do not fear an outburst of war in Europe on any major or important issue," he said, "but I do fear that some trivial and unimportant incident may move some little man who is dictator to feel he has been slighted and cause him to drag out his army for another war.

Advocating a "closer understanding" between the republics of Central and South America and this country, the mayor declared: "We don't want any more encroachment in South American territory than we want in our own, and we must marshal the best diplomats in our service to that end."

Referring to the recession and unemployment as a "little trouble right here at home," the speaker declared facing the problems of peace—poverty, unemployment and suffering—"is sometimes more difficult than facing combat in war."

"Mistakes Our Own."

"We make mistakes—that's a privilege of any democracy—but they are our own mistakes. We have established the most perfect form of government that imperfect humans can do and we must solve our problems in our own American way—it must not be Latin, Teutonic or any other way."

Severely criticizing those who think "Congress should be abolished or that Americans haven't enough sense to vote," the fiery little New Yorker almost shouted "I for one couldn't get along with a dictator and it would be very little comfort to my widow if I was shot by a Communist or Fascist dictator."

Following Mayor LaGuardia's address, Dr. Ze Barney Phillips, chaplain of the United States Senate and member of the Cathedral Chapter, delivered a sermon in which he urged America to stay out of war.

"I agree with the President," Dr. Phillips said, "that America should be armed only for peace and that that armament should be adequate."

More than 300 persons participated in the parade of colors, marching down the Pilgrim steps and encircling the amphitheater at the start of the service. Music was furnished by the Marine Band under Capt. Taylor Branson.

The Rev. Arlington A. McCallum, rector of St. Paul's Parish and chaplain general of the Military Order of the World War, led the congregation in commemorative prayers.

Throng of 50,000 At Zoo to View The Baby Hippo

Official population figures at the Zoo yesterday remained static, while nearly 50,000 visitors passed through the gates and officials gave up attempts to predict which animals would next become parents.

Dr. William Mann, Zoo director, admitted the gayals and the penguins might be visited by the stork soon, but after the way the pigmy hippo fooled him, he "has given up trying to be a prophet."

Meanwhile, the baby pigmy hippo, fresh from a Saturday night bath, greeted the crowds for the first time since it appeared at the Zoo two weeks ago.

Zoo police reported that after the bath the day was quiet. Two children strayed from their parents, but were returned soon afterward. One woman fainted.

Carter also won contests closed to members of the National Aeronautical Association, with an average flying time of 3 minutes 6 seconds.

Second place in the N. A. A. contest went to Jim Long, of Clarksburg, W. Va., on average flight of 2 minutes 30 seconds, and third place to Dale Lively, also of Clarksburg, who plane averaged 2 minutes 1 second.

Second place in the open meet was won by Ralph Campbell, 1239 Thirty-second street northwest, on a flight average of 1 minute 45 seconds.

Averages were based on the two longest flights made in the two days of the meet.

The meet was sponsored by the N. A. A. and the Costello American Legion Post, and was directed by Frank Elvidge, of 1616 K street northwest.

More than 1,000 persons witnessed Sunday's flights while nearly half that number were present at preliminary heats Saturday.

Carter will be given a flying trip to New York City as the guest of the famous flyer, Clarence Chamberlain, whose personal representative, Capt. George Maimes, attended the meet.

Three cups also will be presented to Carter at a banquet of the Aero Club of Washington, at the Mayflower Hotel, Thursday, one cup for first place in each class and one trophy as grand prize.

Exhibition of Model Trains Is Opened in D. C.

Enthralled by the operation of realistic model trains, three children gaze at the exhibit at 2020 M street northwest. They are (left to right) Duane Miller, 12; Patsy Goodwin, 10, and Roberta Goodwin, 8. Below—I. N. Goodwin holds his model of the York, built for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in 1831.

Devotees of the cult of miniature train construction take their hobby seriously; most of the exhibitors, in fact, are members of the Metropolitan Society of Model Engineers.

I. N. Goodwin, for instance, worked off and on for a year fashioning a replica of the "York," which went into service on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad in 1831. Goodwin made several trips to Baltimore to study the original model of the "York," constructed by Phineas Davis, New York watchmaker.

The B. & O. specifications, Goodwin explained, called for a locomotive weighing less than ten tons, with a wheelbase short enough to keep the engine on the rails as it rounded the curves on the old Ellicott City run, snorting along at 11 miles an hour.

From the spikes in the tracks to the Pullman car washbowls, all the models are handmade. Stations were built with cardboard, and the hills to go over the tunnels were made of chicken wire, burlap and plaster of Paris.

More than half the 54 members of the society are represented in the exhibit, while two clubs in Baltimore have sent samples of their craftsmanship. The models are insured for $10,000.

The exhibit will be open to the public every day this week until 10 p. m.

Johnson Calls Preparedness Best Guarantee

Addresses Audience of 500 at Memorial Service for Jewish War Dead.

"Reasonable preparedness" is the best guarantee of American liberties, Representative Johnson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, yesterday told an audience of 500 at Memorial Day services for the city's Jewish war dead, held in the Adas Israel Congregatio Cemetery.

American military power will never be exerted, however, to support a policy of "expand or die," he said, attributing to that urge the Italian conquest of Ethiopia and Germany's annexation of Austria.

Although he credited President Wilson and Congress with "making every reasonable effort at their command" to keep America out of the World War, the Oklahoman warned, "it might be well for us to remember the price of the last World War and quote the cost in order to keep our people peace conscious."

Other speakers were Joseph F. Barr, commander, Washington Post No. 58, Jewish War Veterans; Col. Julius I. Peyser, commander, Vincent B. Costello Post, American Legion; Mrs. Jennie D. Diamond, president, Washington Ladies' Auxiliary No. 58, Jewish War Veterans, and Edward Rosenblum, chairman of the Memorial Day committee.

John Wesley Service Held In Churches

200th Anniversary of Methodism Founder's Conversion Marked.

The 200th anniversary of the conversion of one of Protestantism's greatest leaders—John Wesley—was commemorated yesterday in special sermons preached by Methodist pastors and clergymen of other denominations.

Among the leaders of the clergy citing the contribution of the founder of Methodism to civilization was Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, who told the congregation yesterday morning: "In a barren, licentious age, seething with moral rottenness, a new voice was heard. John Wesley spoke like a Hebrew prophet and a Christian apostle come to life."

"Marvelous Ministry."

"As we commemorate the marvelous ministry of John Wesley," he pointed out, "it is vital to realize that we in our day may perpetuate his praises and repeat his behavior and copy his policies, yet never come within celestial hailing distance of the secret of the true inwardness of his light."

Speaking as guest speaker at Metropolitan Methodist Church, Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, chancellor of American University, said: "The warning greatly needed today is that unless the Wesleyan impulse becomes principal and fundamental, the philanthropic impulse cannot long endure. No reorganization of social institutions or readjustment of social relations can produce a secure and happier world, for such adjustments leave unchanged the unorganized forces of personal selfishness which continually wreck Utopia."

"Greatest Contribution."

Dr. Walter M. Michael told his congregation at Elderbrook Methodist Church that "the validity of conversion was John Wesley's greatest contribution to history."

That is the thing that has made the Methodist Church stand out for two centuries. "The faith of Wesley," he declared, "took on a new impetus and strength after his experience at Aldersgate."

"Belongs to Us All."

"Some of our church leaders have been too great to be claimed by any denomination," he said in his sermon last night. "He belongs to us all. Others may have been greater theologians, but no one has ever surpassed him in quiet, passionate earnestness."

From the pulpit of Lewis Memorial Methodist Church, the Rev. John A. Trader declared: "Wesley found that one could, through a very definite experience, know that he was a disciple of Christ. This experience lead to a joyous singing of triumph for religion."

Civic Theater Hits Bull's-Eye In Novel Play

By Nelson B. Bell

In " . . . one third of a nation . . ." given its first public presentation in the Wardman Park Theater last night, the Civic Theater offers a novel, vivid and vital treatise upon an acute national problem.

Presented as "A Living Newspaper on Housing," this unique production traces the tenement and slum conditions in this country from the days of the original land grants by the Governor of New York to Trinity Church, in the year 1705, to the present and in so doing charts the course of an unchanging and unending "system" based on the avarice of the rich, the penury of the poor and the indifference of city government to conditions that are as disgraceful as they are appalling.

The "living newspaper" form of presentation borrows the technique, invisualized form, of those radio programs in which a microphone voice outlines the development of events and expository playlets then are enacted to give them point and dramatic realism. For this purpose a "space stage" is employed, set on three levels upon all of which action is frequently taking place. The scenes are terminated by blackouts and when the incidents of the story do not require the tenement dwellings to be shown, they are masked out by velvet drapes. The composite result is tremendously effective. Added pith is lent this strange drama by a "Little Man" of the present era, who comes up out of the audience to explore the topic of housing through running colloquies with the "voice of the living newspaper" that emanates from a loudspeaker at one side of the auditorium.

Shame on Washington.

Not only does ". . . one-third of a nation . . ." expose the evils of the present and past slum conditions in our large cities—New York is made the scene of the play—but it also explores the health records of these overcrowded and squalid metropolitan areas. They are shocking. A scene has been interpolated to reveal the health statistics of the National Capital, which also is shocking. It discloses that Washington's mortality rate is second highest in the United States and that its alleys produce a death rate a considerable percentage higher than the average of the city from tuberculosis, diphtheria, alcoholism, syphilis and other dread maladies.

For the interpretation of all this documetnary drama a cast of extraordinary proportions is required. So many take part, as a matter of fact, that it is impossible to accord individual credits, beyond saying that Ed Stevlingson was excellent as the microphone voice of the evening and that Murray Sheehan did an uncommonly fine job as the befuddled "Little Man," whose name was Angus Buttonkooper.

The hordes of others who took part in the proceedings, under the skillful direction of F. Cowles Strickland, performed with a uniform degree of excellence that stamps " . . . one-third of a nation . . ." as the supreme achievement of the Civic Theater since the time of its organization.

The fact that the play, at base, is a mighty piece of dramatic propaganda for governmental slum clearance detracts in no way from its appeal and its power as engrossing entertainment. I urge all Washington to see it.

Little

A foreign flavor permeates the new bill that opened at the Little Theater, India and Mexico providing the locales of the two features comprising the major items of the program.

"Elephant Boy" is the principal attraction on this duplex screen bill. It was in this subject, it will be recalled, that that remarkable youngster, Sabu, made his debut before cinema audiences and scored an immediate triumph as one of the most precocious juvenile actors ever brought before the cameras. He is cast as the "baby" of a long line of famous hunters, who, himself, longs to be recognized as one possessed of sufficient prowess to be ranked with his elders among the great huntsmen of the jungles.

The story of "Elephant Boy" has been nicely contrived from elements that ordinarily might not be expected to embody any great measure of box-office value, but with Sabu in the stellar role and the simple naturalness with which it is told, it becomes a minor classic among film plays of its type. Sabu is buffeted around the camp until he is impelled to run away with the biggest and wisest elephant in the herd. Those in charge of the ivory hunt must find a "lost herd" of pachyderms to make good with the backers of their safari. Sabu solves their problem, single-handed, in a series of episodes that are rich in adventure, pathos and thrills. The picture is worthy of repeated revivals.

The secondary feature of the bill is the famous "Redes," presented under the American title of "The Wave." It has its locale in the small fishing village of Alvarado, on the Mexican sea coast, and depicts with complete fidelity the lives and labors of the residents who make their livelihood from a constant struggle with the sea. In his pictures based on the lives of other primitive people, Robert Flaherty never achieved a more beautiful or more dramatically potent camera drama than this.

The film was devised, photographed and supervised in its every aspect by Paul Strand, one of the world's greatest photographers. His pictorial effects, needless to say, are supremely beautiful, but, beyond that he has evolved a poetic sort of drama that is universal in its appeal, true in its reflection of human impulses and tense in many of its situations.

"The Wave" is enacted by the resident fishermen of Alvarado and was filmed under great difficulties on a sopt remote from any community approaching the proportions of a city. It consumes approximately an hour of running time and is a masterpiece of its kind.

Abbey Players Paid Handsome Tribute By the Final Audience of the Season

Standing Salute and 'Auld Lang Syne' Marked End of Last Act at National Saturday Night; Box-Office Champions for March; We Make a Correction; Fight Films in Bethesda; Notes of the Theater.

HAVING completed their week's engagement at the National Theater—as well as their American tour and the National's 1937-'38 season—with flawless performances of Sean O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars," a second performance of Lennox Robinson's "The Far Off Hills" and the same author's comedy of "Drama at Inish," the Abbey Theater Players on Saturday night were paid a deserved and moving tribute by the audience.

BELL.

At the conclusion of the last act of "Drama at Inish," saluting the players with salvos of applause, the house came to its feet and the orchestra struck into the strains of "Auld Lang Syne." The company on the stage was as visibly moved as those out front. The sentimental gesture was acknowledged across the footlights in a gracious speech of appreciation by F. R. Higgins, manager of the American tour.

This American tour of the Abbey Theater Players has been of seven months duration and has spanned the continent. The New York engagement was a record-breaking success. "The Far Off Hills had a continuous run of seven weeks, in addition to the weeks devoted to the presentation of the other plays in the repertoire. The road tour was scarcely less successful—with the exception of Milwaukee and St. Louis, where, for some inexplicable reason, the box-office response was meager. The remainder of the long trek to the coast and back was in the nature of a triumphal procession.

The company sails for home next Saturday, after a week of relaxation in New York. They are all pretty tired after eight performances a week for seven months, with a change of bill at practically every performance.

May they return soon again and demonstrate once more to American audiences what acting really is like.

It is all right with me, but Twentieth Century-Fox has taken the long way to titling and billing its new production of "Kidnapped," starring Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew and Arleen Whelan, with C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen, John Carradine, Nigel Bruce, Ralph Forbes, H. B. Warner and scores more of note in important roles. The approved spelling in my gift volume of the latest Webster's unabridged is "Kidnaped," and I notice that the same is true in Funk and Wagnall's. However, if Robert Louis Stevenson spelled it with two "p's" I'll gladly shut up.

There were more "Box-Office Champions" than usual in March, according to the tabulation of bona fide, key-city box-office statements, published in the Motion Picture Herald of May 21— eight of them altogether. Some of them, I feel, are not real champions, but, as I have said before, those quarters and half-dollars laid on the line can't be wrong.

The pictures that finished in front on the financial statements were as follows: "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," "The Baroness and the Butler," "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," "The Goldwyn Follies," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "A Slight Case of Murder," "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" and "A Yank at Oxford." Not one of these but has been viewed by Washington audiences, so there is no need to go into the matters of stars, casts, directors and the like.

It might be permissible in passing, nevertheless, to point out that this recapitulation of what the country at large really thought of the current releases gives United Artists and Twentieth Century-Fox two "champions" each, and Paramount, Warner Brothers, RKO and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer one.

It would be interesting to find out why, in my resume of the season of legitimate drama which closed last Saturday night in the Capital, published in Sunday's Post, I listed "Save Me the Waltz" as a musical production when it was no such thing. It must have been that word "waltz" that did it. "Save Me the Waltz," of course, was Katherine Dayton's comedy of kings, queens, princesses and dictators, produced by Max Gordon. It just goes to show what writing a Sunday lead at 3 a. m., Friday morning will do for you after already having written a daily column, an Abbey Players review and a Boro Theater opening that day—not to mention editing all the Sunday copy, if you know what that means. At any rate, "Save Me the Waltz" was not a musical. So that leaves only two for the season—which is altogether too few.

Comes a letter from J. Henry Hiser, proprietor of the State Theater, in Bethesda, Md.

"Digging through some old film files, an agent of ours discovered the only motion picture record made of the famous Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney fight, held in Chicago back in 1927. Since, up to this time, these pictures have never been available to local fans, we are going to show them on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, May 24, 25, 26.

"Due to the fact that Max Schmeling and Joe Louis have signed to meet each other again this summer, we thought some of our patrons would like to see Max knock out Joe again. So in addition to the above, we will show the Schmeling Louis bout of 1936."

That looks to this corner like a pretty good card—especially since the fight films are to be shown in conjunction with the State's regular feature attractions.

Belasco

"LOOK OUT FOR LOVE." Gaumont British picturization of a story by Ray Lewis, adapted to the screen by Florence Tranter and Monckton Hoffe, costarring Anna Neagle and Tullio Carminati, with Robert Douglas, Horace Hodges, Griselda Hervey, Miki Hood, Leonard Snelling, Arthur Chesney and Henry Wolston. Directed by Herbert Wilcox.

One of England's three foremost feminine screen stars—Gracie Fields and Jessie Matthews are the other two—Ann Neagle is an actress of exceptional versatility.

Having achieved a notable success in the role of "Victoria the Great"—a task comparable to Helen Hayes' in "Victoria Regina"—Miss Neagle now is seen as a barrel-organ girl, waitress and dancer in "Look Out for Love," which opened with a Friday night preview on the screen at the Belasco Theater. It is a story of striking contrasts with which Gaumont British has provided its star in this subject. The divergent social strata involved are an impoverish family living in Soho, in London, and a young aristocrat, high in the diplomatic councils of his country.

Jacqueline is playing her barrel-organ in front of a night club when an opulent Daimler draws up and discharges a handsome young man who is annoyed that his approach should have been impeded by so plebeian an obstruction. However, he is intrigued by the independent bravado of the beautiful girl who has been grinding out her tunes. The police are not so impressed. Through the intervention of Father Donnelly, a kindly priest, Jacqueline is taken to Marius Andreani with the plea that he intervene in her behalf.

From this incident spring the developments that find Jacqueline first an unsuccessful waitress, who loses her job because she chats with Marius when he comes to the place to dine, and then a successful dancer, whose training is surreptitiously paid for by Andreani. Subsequent complications lead to his discharge from the diplomatic corps and departure from the country. On the boat he finds Jacqueline who has decided that love is greater than a career. They sail away together.

Miss Neagle has every qualification for a complete realization of her role and Tullio Carminati is no less fully equipped for the role of the diplomat. Robert Douglas furnishes the sinister note, as Nigel, and Horace Hodges is the Father Donnelly. The supporting cast is equal to the demands laid upon it.

The new bill is completed by short-reel subjects and news events.

Metropolitan

"DANGEROUS TO KNOW." Paramount picturization of a play by Edgar Wallace, adapted to the screen by William K. Lipman and Horace McCoy. Featuring Anna May Wong, Akim Tamiroff and Gail Patrick, with Lloyd Nolan, Harvey Stevens, Anthony Quinn, Roscoe Karns, Porter Hall, Hedda Hopper, Hugh Sothern, Edward Pawley and Eddie Marr. Directed by Edward T. Howe. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud. At the Metropolitan.

"Dangerous to Know" is apparently made of stray tag-ends of Edgar Wallace mystery, detective and gangster plots which were left lying around in the Paramount story department. It has bathos rather than pathos, and its tensest moments stimulates one to titters rather than tears.

Which is saddening, for there is a long list of fine actors tossed into the plot, helter-skelter, who deserve more dignified treatment. Anna May Wong, exotic as a lotus flower, probably comes out with top honors in the dreary battle for recognition, though even she is given lines which would wilt a sunflower.

Akim Tamiroff, sterling actor that he is, seems often overcome by ennui, though he strives nobly to restrain his yawning. Stock players Lloyd Nolan, Roscoe Karns, Anthony Quinn, Porter Hall, Hedda Hopper (Post columnist), all contribute sturdy support.

Tamiroff is a reformed gangster with a yen for pipe organ renditioning of Mozart and Bach, and later, a yen for the socially ranking Gail Patrick, who, alas, loves another. Anna May Wong, the Tamiroff "hostess," tells Akim he is reaching too far, but he, music lover and conqueror of finance that he is, storms, stamps and schemes till he has Gail in his clutches.

Then Anna May daggers herself to death, which is too very bad, for she is a lovely thing and the story needs her. But die she does, and then Akim stops 'chin' for the moon and goes docilely off to jail. Moral: Don't trade a blackjack for a high hat, to quote Inspector Lloyd Nolan, who seemed to have more fun with his policing and his pipe than is quite cricket in such a macabre blending of cliches, outmoded symbolism, half-baked dramatizing and over-reaching fatalism.

In a Grantland Rice Sportlight short, there is a canoe trip through Florida waters and alligators and monkeys and 'coons and other animal life and nature touches. Good underseas swimming.

Trans-Lux

The Trans-Lux Theater is heading well into its sixty-third week with one of the best bills yet. The newsreel portion of the performance fairly reeks with variety. Just for a thought, here are some of the news shots you will see The Arm Air Force stages its first air raid drill at night, while over in Shanghai, a Japanese plane makes an 800-mile flight with one wing. Anticipating her seventy-first birthday, Queen Mother Mary presents the colors to her regiment. There are some thrilling shots of the ill-fated hotel fire in Atlanta, Ga., while in contrast we find tulip time in Holland, Mich.

Lew Lehr is on hand again with his never-to-be-patterned dialogue. The sports end of the show is replete with everything from golf, boat racing, tug of war, fancy diving, football in New York and horse jumping in Australia. There is also a wrestling match.

In the realm of the shorts there is a special Government picture of Bonneville Dam and a special of the Pimlico classic. "Boat Builders" is the R. K. O. cartoon and a new "Pictorial Revue" is released from Vitaphone. "Windward Way" shows the yachtsmen getting under way for the 150-mile Miami-Nassau race, with some very thrilling shots of the boats during the race.

And last but not least, there is one for both young and old, a real "Our Gang" comedy, with the title of "Canned Fishing."

Columbia

As long as "the glamorous, amorous Lamour" is her comely, sarong-clad self, and the grounded aviators, Ray Milland and Lynne Overman, are having a pleasant time with all their island playmates, i. e., Lamour, GaGa the monkey and a baby lion—the picture is O. K. and very pretty, too, in its technicolor, but when Dorothy becomes a white goddess and Mr. J. Carroll Naish enters the picture, and all the crocodiles in captivity join the cast, it goes both silly and nightmarish. The combined crocodile-earthquake-volcano scene is enough to send children into hysterics and great big grownups like you and me to bed with a lighted lamp beside us. It is just too, too, and keeps on and on.

The story? Two aviators hunting for a third; the two crash on an island somewhere east, west, north or south of Malay; meet a girl, meet a hostile tribe of natives, etc. The girl was stolen from white parents so it's all right for Ray to fall in love with her.

Lamour and Milland are handsome and surprisingly sincere, Overman and his monkey pal are honestly and consistently amusing.

There are two installments of "Lone Ranger," if you can stand any more excitement. A Cabin Kids comedy and the newsreel complete the bill.—D. J. L.

Stars of Hot-Weather Diversion

Left—Fred MacMurray and Harriet Hilliard, as they appear in "Cocoanut Grove," the film play that glorifies one of Hollywood's foremost rendezvous for the great and near-great of the film colony, coming soon to the Capital. Right (above)—Joan Bennett and an unknown young actor in "The Texans," a new "epic" of the Southwest. Inset—Russ Cullen, who conducts the Sidney orchestra for dancing on the Wilson Line's "City of Washington," plying the Potomac nightly.

If Sam will stop talking long enough to produce great pictures, which he can do, and has, instead of making headlines which take second place to our politicians, the motion picture industry won't need saving; there'll be nothing wrong with it. In the last month they've released some of the greatest pictures ever seen. And half a dozen more are ready to follow.

Doesn't Sam know we're in the midst of a depression, with food and clothing still more important than entertainment?

They finally did it. After trying for years, the Los Angeles Light Opera Festival—like Stagehand—romped home to a great victory. Any city, civic minded enough and with a love for music, can do it. Of course, I mean that smash hit, "Blossom Time," with golden-voiced John Charles Thomas, and Francia White. Superb comedian Melville Cooper came into his own.

If the pictures don't snaffle up Dancer Marjorie Belcher, lighter than air, but much prettier—looked like a blossom in the breeze—they're not as smart as I've given them credit for.

Admiral C. C. Block said it made him feel a boy again. The Walt Disneys, Walter Pidgeon, Edward Everett Horton, Edna May Oliver, and of course, our composers and musicians, were present. Our guilded stars, who cry tears big as hailstones at the lack of culture and good theater in our home town, were strangely absent, but not missed. There wasn't a vacant seat in the house.

RKO-Keith's

The most eloquent commentary that can be made upon the merit of "Mad About Music" is to offer the reminder—as if one were needed!—that it is now in its fourth week on the screen at RKO-Keith's. For three-quarters of a month this Deanna Durbin vehicle has been extolled by the press and by the public until it is almost as well known as "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

This is principally due to the extraordinary endowments possessed by Miss Durbin. She not only is a soprano of the first rank, but an actress of the same rating. She is sweet, unaffected and charming. All of these qualities in combination, plus a screen play that permits them to be utilized, cannot spell anything but a smash hit. That is what "Mad About Music" has proved to be.

It is a sort of "Daddy-Long-Legs" story that forms the basis of the picture. A young girl invents a fictitious father, who happens to come true and fulfils all of her dreams. The father is played understandingly and sympathetically by Herbert Marshall. The supporting cast is such as to do credit to the co-stars.

 WASHINGTON: MONDAY, MAY 23, 1938 13

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, May 22.—It pains us to report that Zeke Bonura miscalculated his popularity in Chicago. This was supposed to be the day when the large Italian—making his first appearance in Comiskey Park in a Washington uniform—was to laugh out loud at Jimmy Dykes. He was sure Chicago fans resented the trade that sent him to Washington. The thousands of Chicago followers would be out in force. They would cheer him.

POVICH

Dykes would not dare to show his face outside of the dugout in the face of the ovation for Bonura, the Comiskey Park favorite whom he had traded away. Zeke is not the type to rub it in, but he couldn't help it if Chicago fans didn't like the trade. Those cheers would be sweet music to his ears.

But somewhere, something went wrong. Because when Bonura jauntily stepped to the plate in the first inning, the sound that met his ears was strange, indeed. If there were any cheers, they were drowned in an outburst of rich, ripe boos. Startled, Bonura looked about as if to assure himself that he had heard aright.

But there wasn't much doubt about it. They were booing him, all right. Where were the thousands who had said they would boycott the White Sox after the Kuhel-Bonura trade? How about the hundreds who had written Zeke stacks of fan mail saying he was the most popular player in White Sox history? And the committee from Chicago's Little Italy who were to throw a huge ballroom party for Zeke tomorrow night?

• • • •

If they were here in the White Sox Park today they were sadly outnumbered, and out-demonstrated. Because there was no comparison between the scattered cheers and the thunderous jeers that greeted Zeke. Bonura was pretty grim as he faced the pitching of Ted Lyons.

And then, it was his tough luck to strike out—to miss a vicious third strike by a half foot. Then did the boos truly begin to crash down upon his ears. And then a bright yellow pellet was flung toward Bonura from the grandstands. It was a lemon, and a small shower of lemons followed. They were being hurled toward Big Zeke, and the implication was plain enough.

All afternoon, Bonura suffered. This was the one day when he wanted to hit that ball. To show his Chicago friends that Dykes had made a sad mistake. But he couldn't get up a gallop at the plate. He struck out. He sent two tame flies to the outfield and he was thrown out by 30 feet on an infield grounder in his last time at bat.

Before the game he had been interviewed on the radio. "I am glad to talk to my Chicago friends," he said. So said, too, that he had not wanted to leave Chicago. He held no grudge against Dykes, he declared, but in the next breath he said it would be nice to beat the White Sox, particularly, intimating that it would be nice to beat Dykes' team.

• • • •

At this time it's possible to get a rather clear picture of the Bonura-Kuhel trade, and its effects. Despite the anti-Bonura demonstration today, the Nats appear to have gained the better of the bargain. Let's have a look at the figures.

Neither Bonura nor Kuhel have startled anybody with their hitting. And it is a bit surprising that Kuhel boasts the better batting average even with his .254. Because Bonura is, at this writing, a mere .241 hitter. But closer inspection reveals that big Zeke has been of far more value to the Nats than Kuhel has been to Dykes.

Kuhel, idle for several days with a wrenched instep, has been to bat only 40 per cent as many times as Bonura, but he has driven in less than 10 per cent as many runs. Bonura, despite his dismal batting average, has produced 22 runs for the Washington club. Kuhel has driven in exactly two runs for he White Sox.

And on the other side of the picture, the edge is also heavily with Bonura. Supposed to be the inferior fielder of the two, big Zeke boasts a .991 defensive average to Kuhel's .977. In 350 chances in the field, Zeke has made only three errors. Kuhel has erred five times in 205 chances.

• • • •

It was Bonura's tough luck to make his debut with the Nats in Chicago at a time when he is in the throes of one of his woeful slumps. In his last 46 times at bat Big Zeke has connected for only six hits. It is a typical Bonura slump, the type that added many gray hairs to the thatch of Jimmy Dykes in former years.

"There are long stretches when Bonura couldn't make a hit if he carried an armful of shovels up there to the plate," Dykes had said. "Out there now, he's in one of those slumps. He had 'em with us last year." But we seem to recall that, nevertheless, Bonura hit .345 last year. When he wasn't in those slumps he must have done a powerful lot of hitting to amass that figure. That's what Bucky Harris thinks, too, and that's why he's very much contented with the trade.

In short—

Last season Bonura's wealthy father, a New Orleans fruit wholesaler, offered Zeke $100 for each home run he hit . . . When Zeke started producing homers thick and fast, his dad finally settled for a lump sum . . . Al Simmons today celebrated his thirty-fifth birthday . . . by getting the ball out of the infield only once . . . Playing first base for Chicago while Joe Kuhel is recuperating is Outfielder Rip Radcliff, of all people . . . because as an outfielder, Radcliff had the reputation of being the league's worst on ground balls . . . He hasn't

Giants Shell Buc Hurlers; Win, 18 to 2

Hubbell Wins Fifth Game as Terrymen Shake Losing Jinx.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 22.—The Giants shot out of the hitting doldrums today with their heaviest run-making assault of the season to trample the Pittsburgh Pirates, 18 to 2, and end their four-game losing streak.

King Carl Hubbell, after giving up two runs in the first inning, pitched shutout ball the rest of the way for his fifth win of the season against one defeat to the entertainment of a crowd of 30,343 at the Polo Grounds.

The Giants, who have scored exactly three runs in their last four games, were sparked by a 15-hit attack that buried Dutch Brandt, Bill Swift and Rookie Truett Sewell. Harry Danning contributed a homer with the bases loaded and a triple to drive in six runs. Jojo Moore whacked a homer with two aboard. In fact, everyone in the line-up, except for Shortstop Dick Bartell and Second Baseman Mickey Haslin, hit safely at least once. Haslin was given Lou Chiozza's infield berth because of the latter's weak batwork.

The Giants looked like the "Big Inning" Yankees as they did their run-making in clusters, counting three in the first, four in the third, five in the fifth and half a dozen in the seventh.

After the first inning, when doubles by Arky Vanghan and Johnny Rizzo brought in the Pittsburgh runs, only one Pirate reached third base.

H. G. Walters Wins Skeet Shoot Here, Breaking 25 Birds

In an open invitation skeet tournament, which saw about 300 participants from all local and nearby clubs, H. G. Walters won the 410-gage event by breaking 25 clays out of 25 shots in the extra shoot against Vic Franks. Both had previously tied with 48 out of a possible 50. In taking second place, Franks hit the clay objects 24 times in the 25 attempts.

R. M. Watson took top honors in the 20-gage event after he and Walters had tied by cracking 50 in 50 shots. He went on to break 24 while Watson broke 23 in the shoot-off of 25.

The 12-gage division brought Watson to the front again as he struck the clay pigeons 99 times out of 100 attempts. Walters was runner-up in this class. R. E. Stewart won the double A class with 97 successful shots, while Fred Ransdell captured second-place honors by cracking 94 in 100 shots.

In class A, L. A. Singer won by hitting the clays 98 times. The runner-up was W. P. Lawson, who broke 96. Walters returned to the firing line in class B and grabbed first place with 93, while G. A. Chaney got a total of 90. William Boritt clinched the crown in class C by shooting 89. W. R. Clodselter paced Boritt with a total of 82.

Boston Runs Streak to 7; Shoffner Is Hero.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 22.—The Boston Bees forged link No. 7 in their victory chain today as Milburn Shoffner, their 31-year-old southpaw rookie, won his own ball game by singling home the winning run in the eleventh inning of the series opener with the Chicago Cubs. The score was 2 to 1.

The winning streak equals the longest the Boston club has enjoyed since it was named the Bees two years ago.

Shoffner hurled the entire distance for the victors, who, by winning their third extra-inning contest in four days, advanced to within one game of second place in the National League.

A crowd of 20,161 watched as Shoffner, pitching seven-hit ball, cut down the Chicagoans, who themselves invaded National League Park with a four-game winning streak. Although he fanned eight men, he issued seven passes.

The Bees, who left 12 men stranded, had several opportunities to win before the eleventh. They filled the bases in the tenth with two gone, but Cooney popped out.

In the eleventh, however, Garms led off by reaching first on a swinging bunt and went to second on Mueller's sacrifice. Then, after Warstler walked, Shoffner slapped a well-placed single over Second Baseman Billy Herman's head, and Garms scored easily.

Shoffner was invincible after the first inning, when the Cubs made their only run. Hack opened with a double, and scored on Augie Galan's grounder through Rabbit Warstler's legs. Galan's smash was so hard hit it was scored as a single.

Boston made the equalizer in the fourth when Cooney doubled, went to third on DiMaggio's outfield fly, and scored on West's single to right.

Honors Won By Fadeley's Show Horse

Lacquer Lady Awarded Grand Championship at Meadowbrook.

By Gene Reed.

In a closely contested finish that required the judges to call out both horses for conformation rating, Fenton M. Fadeley's Lacquer Lady won the grand championship of the annual Columbus Horse and Pony Show yesterday afternoon. A crowd of about 1,500 spectators was on hand to witness the 16 classes which opened with a series of pony competitions in the morning.

Tied with Lacquer Lady on point score and awarded the reserve championship of the meeting was Hubbert R. Quinter's Sonny Boy. Each of the top horses of the day had piled up a score of ten points when the last class ended. It was therefore necessary for Mrs. Dean Bedford, of Monkton, Md., and Edward S. Voss, of Fallston, Md., arbiters of all hunter and jumper contests, to bring the two championship candidates into the ring where Lacquer Lady was awarded the tricolor.

Class 1—Saddle ponies, 12.2 and under—Janney, Jimmie Edelblut; second, Napoleon, David Martin; third, Victorian II, Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh; fourth, Lady Betty, June Curran.

Class 2—Saddle poines over 12.2 and under 14.2—First, Busy Bee, Robert Palmer; second, Rathbone's Rascal, Dean Rathbone, jr.; third, Gallant Lady, Mrs. E. R. Routt; fourth, Billy Boy, Mickey McGill.

Class 3—Pony jumping for ponies 12.2 and under—First, Lady Betty, June Curran; second, Victorian II, Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh; third, Star Boy, David Belding; fourth, Valiant, Mrs. E. R. Routt.

Bob Feller Unable To Pitch; Muscle In Back Hurting

Cleveland, May 22 (AP).—Bob Feller was removed for a pinch hitter in the third inning of the Indians' game with the Yankees here today, after holding the world's champions to a one-pop single in their three turns at bat.

A strained muscle in his back, which has bothered Feller for nearly two weeks, caused Manager Oscar Vitt to take him out as a precautionary measure. He was replaced by Johnny Humphries, a young right-hander, who previously had appeared in only one game.

Cousin of Mize Signs With Bucs

San Bernardino, Calif., May 22 (AP).—Johnny Mize, 17, San Bernardino High School catcher and cousin of the St. Louis Cardinals' big first baseman of the same name, has signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Mize, who will report next month, worked out with the Pirates in spring training.

Reds Defeat Dodgers, 8-3

Goodman, Craft, Weaver Heroes of Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 22.—Ival Goodman hit his tenth homer of the season, Harry Craft walloped his second and Big Jim Weaver did a handy job of pitching today as the Cincinnati Reds stretched their winning streak to three straight with an 8-to-3 victory over the Dodgers.

After giving up nine hits in 8 2-3 innings, Weaver had to retire from the game when Leo Durocher's hard lin smash hit him in the leg.

Phillies Beat Cards, 2 to 1

McGee and Sivess Wage Duel for 8 Innings.

Philadelphia, May 22.—The Philadelphia National Leaguers drove in two runs in the last half of the ninth inning today to snatch a 2-to-1 victory from the St. Louis Cardinals. The Cardinals scored their run in the first half of the ninth.

Fiddler McGee, pitching for St. Louis, and Pete Sivess, of the Phils, each allowed three hits through the first eight scoreless innings.

Brown led off the St. Louis half of the ninth with a single, advanced to second on Stripp's sacrifice. Slaughter drove out a single which brought Brown across the plate.

Browne, batting for Young at the start of the Phillies' half of the inning, doubled to leftfield. A triple by Klein brought in Walters, running for Browne. McGee walked Arnovich and Corbett, loading the bases, and Klein came in with the winning run on a drive by Mueller to Padgett.

Wes Ferrell Walloped for 5 Runs in 6th

(Picture on Page 15.)

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, May 22.—Ancient Ted Lyons, who was pitching in the big leagues when the lasting qualities of their lollipops were the chief concern of the Nats, today wrote his 200th major league victory into the record books.

The old fellow who has been wearing a White Sox uniform for 16 years put an end to Washington's one-game winning streak with a nine-hit performance this cool, crisp afternoon. It wasn't even close. The White Sox licked the Nats by the highly decisive score of 9 to 2.

For five innings it was a stirring pitching duel between Lyons and the equally right-handed Wes Ferrell, with the Washington pitcher nursing a 1-0 lead going into the sixth. And then, to the unbridled delight of the 20,000 customers, the White Sockers lashed out against Ferrell.

Five large, important runs cascaded across the plate in that sixth inning as Ferrell, in a complete reversal of his form, had a harrowing time of it trying to negotiate three outs. Three batters he walked during the inning, and then the White Sox wheeled their heavy artillery into action to take a 5-1 lead.

Visions of No-Hitter.

Ferrell lasted the inning out, by grace of Manager Bucky Harris' patience, and Harry Kelley was offered up to the White Sox in the seventh inning. They knocked Kelley loose from two runs in the seventh and two more in the eighth and, of course, they didn't take their bats in the ninth.

All of their 11 hits the Sox crowded into the last five innings. Ferrell, seemingly headed toward another of his superlative performances, had held Dykes' men hitless until the fifth. Moreover, not a White Sox had reached base until Berger drew a walk in the fourth.

There were even visions of a no-hit game for Ferrell going into the fifth, but a cheap hit through Buddy Myer's legs by Rip Radcliff dissipated that claim. Chicago made a second hit in that inning, a cheap infield affair, but Ferrell extricated himself from that threat.

And then, all of a sudden, the big right-hander's control deserted him in the sixth. For a time, Mel Almada saved Ferrell from grief with a pair of spectacular, running one-hand catches of long drives to the centerfield fence, but Ferrell required an army of outfielders to turn back the White Sox.

Wes Loses Control.

He walked Kreevich with one out in the sixth and then he pitched a single to Steinbacher that put Kreevich on third. Almada cut off a certain triple when he grabbed Walker's tremendous fly with one hand for the second out, but the tying run scored from third.

Then Ferrell passed both Radcliff and Owen to fill the bases. That brought Jackie Hayes, the former Nat, to the plate and Hayes didn't dally. He socked Ferrell's first pitch between Almada and Simmons for two bases, and three Chicago runs clattered across the plate. Luke Sewell singled to center and the Sox had their fifth run of the inning.

Against Lyons in the early innings, the Nats were a wastrel lot. Lewis and Simmons singled with one out in the first inning and were stranded on base. Travis doubled in the second but was thrown out trying to stretch the blow into a triple, and in the third, Lewis' two bagger against the rightfield wall came to no good.

Brother Rick Scores.

Eventually, in the fifth, the Nats took a 1-0 lead. That was when Rick Ferrell doubled into rightfield, was sacrificed to third by his kid brother and was driven home by Buddy Myer's sharp single to right.

Presented with all those runs by his pals in the sixth inning, Lyons nursed his lead nicely during the rest of the game. In the last four innings, he yielded only two hits—one an infield affair by Buddy Lewis. The other was a home run by Johnny Stone into the rightfield seats in the eighth, by which time the Nats were a gone gang.

Yates and Somerville Dark Horses In British Amateur Tournament

Tough Battle Looms in Tourney Starting Today.

By the Associated Press.

Troon, Scotland, May 22.—Charlie Yates and Sandy Somerville, respectively the happiest and dourest players in the field, became the dark horses tonight to win the British amateur golf championship, starting tomorrow.

Yates has gained prominence for three reasons: He's canning the ball from all over the green; Johnny Fischer, his first-round opponent, has suddenly lost the touch, and, if he gets past Fischer, he'll have a comparatively easy march to the semifinals.

Although ignored by the galleries, Somerville, the veteran Canadian shotmaker, has attracted the critics mainly because he still can hit iron shots closer to the hotel than any man in the field. He came over a month ago to get ready for the championship. He arrived here and found the course closed, but has been practicing on English seaside courses and is on top of his game.

Watching Somerville practice Duncan McCulloch, the Troon pro, remarked, "You can have any man you want. I'll take Sandy."

Yates Appears Ready.

Years ago Yates' fellow townsman, Bobby Jones, predicted great things for Charlie, and, after winning the Western and intercollegiate titles, he may break through this year. The youngster from Atlanta has been unusually diligent about practice since he arrived. When the other members of the Walker Cup team went to a London party, he stayed at the hotel and went to bed.

And while Fischer spent most of today trying to quell a rebellious hook, Charlie, content with his game, went with Johnny Goodman and got some good Scotch religion.

The question now is whether these land's personal favorite, is a mystery. The Cincinnati star couldn't miss when he got off the boat but his fast swing went off the track Thursday and he's been in the hay ever since.

Back of Goodman he's still the second favorite in the betting, but unless he pulls his touch out of the air, Yates will beat him when they start the field off Tuesday.

The Main Question.

For years the United States has won the amateur every time the Walker Cup team competed. Jesse Sweetser did it in 1926, Bob Jones in 1930 and Lawson Little in 1934. The question now is whether these boys can beat each other and still have enough left to produce the winner. Freddie Haas who had a 71 yesterday is hopeful of the final quarter but it's doubtful if he has stamina and experience enough to last eight matches on this tricky, windswept course.

Nine of them play tomorrow, Bobby Dunkelberger, Arthur V. Rogers, jr., a student at Oxford from Winchester, Mass.; Francis Ouimet, Chuck Kocsis, Charles S. Munson, jr., who like Dunkelberger and Rogers is not a member of the Walker Cup team; Marvin Ward, Goodman, Ray Billows, and Reynolds Smith.

Other stars in the first day's field include Robert Sweeny, the defending champion, and Somerville. One feature match in which J. C. L. Jenkins, the veteran who won the title in 1914, meets Hector Thomson, in 1936 winner, is scheduled.

Brenzier Wins.

Brenizer A. C. nosed out Tex Tavern, 5-4, in a 12-inning ball game played on the Cabin John field yesterday. Ructer was the winning pitcher.

Pepsi-Cola Ahead.

In a 12-inning battle, Pepsi-Cola's baseball nine nosed out the Kenilworth team, 2-1, on the Beltsville diamond yesterday. Bill Biglo went all the way for the winners, striking out nine and allowing seven hits. Bost tripled in the ninth to tie up the game and scored a moment later with the winning run.

Little Tavern Wins.

Little Tavern's nine swamped the Cleveland Park Boys Club, 22-4, yesterday. Vitale and Marcellino stole batting honors by gettnig five and four hits, respectively, in six trips to the plate. Cozlin and Wicklein got home runs.

Two No-Hit Games Mark Play in Sandlot Leagues

By Perry Wilkinson.

A pair of no-hit, no-run games featured the National City League play yesterday as the Fairfax Farms Dairy nine walloped the Sanitary Grocery team, 22 to 0, on the No. 9 West Potomac diamond, and Girardians blanked Noland Supplies, 4 to 0, on the Rosedale field.

John de Bettencourt and Dick Baldwin, Fairfax flingers, were in rare form and time after time the Grocery lads just popped the ball up or sent a lazy bounder to the infielders. In addition to his great work on the mound, DeBettencourt blasted out two home runs to grab hitting honors for the day. Durkin and Roland also homered for the winners.

But Al Coe feels he bettered the record of the League A boys, because he went the full distance in his League B game in which, Girardians set down Noland Supplies. Coe, in his no-hit, no-run performance, struck out 11, only walked three, and slammed out a double to aid in winning his game.

In other League A games, Police Boys Club No. 4, which are the real surprise package of the loop, went into a first place tie with Rose Liquor by downing Klein's Tavern, 6-3, while Rose Liquor was trouncing the Atlantic and Pacific aggregation, 9-2. Union Printers marched to their first win of the season by nosing out Market Pharmacy, 8-7.

By receiving a 9-0 forfeit from Capital Transit, the Girardians' team is on top of League B with four wins and no defeats.

Russell Motors stopped Anacostia Motors, 13-9, and Read's Pharmacy defeated the Tucci Plumbing nine, 14-6, to round out the National City League schedule.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Perry (Pat) Patteson won the medal in the Washington Golf Club championship yesterday after a playoff with Johnny Holzberg to co-feature the local links card that found Joe Ballestri winning the Golf Committee Cup at Beaver Dam, Buddy Kahn pacing the Woodmont Club handicap qualifying rounds, and Mr. and Mrs. George Jones winning the Mixed Scotch foursome at Manor.

Other club events included Miss Louise Claytor's winning the French High Commission Cup at Chevy Chase, Maurice Cooper pacing the Argyle ladder qualifications with a creditable 151 total, Allan Lang and W. Benny Loving and Al Jamison defeated Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion Leo Walper and Roger Peacock at Indian Spring, while at Kenwood three tied for first prize in a Blind Bogey tourney. Two flights were decided in the East Potomac tourney, while the final round in 13 others was reached.

Match play rounds will begin Tuesday, with the second round Thursday or Friday, the semifinals Saturday and the final round on Sunday. Joe Baldwin, defending champion, safely qualified for the match play.

D. C. 4-Ball Teams Win

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 22.—Two teams from Indian Spring, one from Hillendale and one from Capital won their way to the semifinal round in the Maryland State Golf Association four-ball match tournament today at Hillendale.

The Hillendale pair, Ernie Caldwell and Gene Bruning, the only Baltimore team left in the running, scored a fairly easy victory over Martin McCarthy and John Miller from Beaver Dam. They were two up passing the ninth and closed out the match with a three by Bruning on the fifteenth.

Frank White and Bill Pendergast, from Capital won the closest match of the day. They defeated Maury Nee and Harvey Johnson from Columbia 1 up when Johnson's last putt for the needed win to send the match into extra hole play rimmed the cup. The victors were two up after they won the fourteenth with a birdie 4. Nee and Johnson won the seventeenth with a birdie 2 after halving the sixteenth in birdie threes.

Buddy Sharkey and Arthur Urban, Indian Spring No. 1 team, were out in even par and were 3-up at the turn. After they won the tenth, it was a matter of how far Fred Savage, jr., and James D. Potts, their Elkridge opponents, would carry the match. The final result was 4 and 3.

Savage, an alternate, played in the place of B. Warren Corkran, veteran and former State champion, who was called out of the city.

Elliott Spicer and Roy Sasscer, the other Indian Spring pair, had to go to the next to last green to win from Billy Houghton and George Malloy, the Capital No. 2 team. Sasscer closed out the match with a birdie 2 on the seventeenth.

Redskins Sign 2 More Players, One a Veteran

Jack Espey, general manager of the Washington Redskins, announced yesterday the signing of two more players, one a veteran, the other a recruit obtained in the draft last fall.

They are End Bob McChesney and Center Dave Price. McChesney has served as a reserve to Wayne Miller and Charley Malone for two seasons. Price, 6 feet 3 inches and 220 pounds, has been regular center for Mississippi State for three years and was a member of the eleven that upset Army in '35. He will be graduated in June.

Big Leagues Draw Record Crowds

New York, May 22 (AP).—Headed by the season's biggest one-game crowd—62,244 who turned out to see the Indians whip the Yankees in Cleveland—major league baseball enjoyed its most successful Sunday of the year today.

A total of 184,887 paying customers were on hand for the eight games, 113,134 in the American League and 71,753 in the National. Only opening day, when more than 200,000 ushered in the season, topped today's total attendance.

The previous one-game high for the year was set by the 54,500 who saw the Tigers open their season in Detroit on April 22.

Newsom Is Beaten in Tenth Inning.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 22.—The Athletics scored three runs in the tenth inning off Buck Newsom, who went in as a relief hurler with two on, to defeat the Brownies, 8 to 5, here today.

Newsom, the Browns' ace pitcher, who went the full route to win over Boston yesterday, was not charged with the defeat since Julio Bonetti had left him on the spot with one away. Newsom walked the first man to fill the bases and Lodigiani singled to score two runs. Potter, Philadelphia pitcher, followed with a sharp single to center to score Siebert with the third run of the inning.

The Browns outhit the Athletics, 14 to 12, but more than offset this by coming up with four costly errors.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

No member of the Nats distinguished himself to any great extent in the 9-to-2 defeat at Chicago yesterday and there are no appreciable gains in the Man of the Month Club contest. However;

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he drove in the run that gave the Nats the lead in the fifth inning when it appeared that one run was important.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he pounded out three hits—one a double—and because he was robbed of a fourth hit by Steinbacher's catch against the rightfield wall.

To Rick Ferrell, two points, because he twice attempted to start rallies with a single and a two-bagger in the early innings.

To Mel Almada, two points, because he saved Wes Ferrell in the early innings with three spectacular catches in centerfield—you know the Almada type.

Kandoo Wins Sailing Race

Dr. Pagan's 20-Footer Proves Her Speed.

Dr. Albert E. Pagan's new 20-foot Kandoo, out for the first time, decisively proved her speed by hanging a 14 minute shellacking on Judge Prentice Edrington's fast Lady Avon and turning in the best time of the day in the fifth race of the Potomac River Sailing Association, off Alexandria, yesterday afternoon. Twenty-footers, Comets and Class A's were unable to finish under the time limit, due to a strong ebb tide and light, variable winds.

Getting off to a bad start, the much discussed Mower-designed chine bottom craft caught the 20-foot fleet at the first marker, after a half-mile beat to windward, and proceeded to walk away from Lady Avon, Cricket II and Myray on the broad one and a half mile reach to the second buoy, to open a lead of over 400 yards. She was never headed and negotiated the 5 miles in 2:07:38. Alice Pagan and Lee Harrison formed Dr. Pagan's afterguard.

The Class B's Snipes and Moths sailed one lap for an official tally. Dr. R. W. Barnhard's Black Cat, skippered by Chris Johnson, easily won in Class B. Dick Shaw's Katishaw was second and J. J. Oliver's Bubble, third.

Sailing in her own backyard, George Lindsay's Wee Too was a wee bit too much for Tom Stokes' Rush Too. Jack Babcock's Indigo Under came home third and Bo-Peep and Scud, sailed by Bernard Berkow and Woodward Marsh, respectively, were fourth and fifth.

In the Comet Class, which was off the record due to overtime work in the tide, Bill White's Frolic beat Verner Smythe's Sassy Too by the slender margin of 8 seconds. Clyde Cruit was third with So Big and Ernie Covert's Escapade landed in fourth place, followed by Henry Brylawski's Nimbus.

Harry Humfeld's Spray, true to form, sailed to the finish in 2:31:14, to lead George Danker's Sinkquick and Lewis Geiser's Sandpiper, which did not finish.

A double-header for Comets, 20-footers, and Class A boats will be held June 5.

Tigers Beat Red Sox, 4-3

York Hits for Circuit With Bases Filled.

Detroit, May 22.—For the second time in a week Rudy York hit a home run with the bases loaded today and gave the Detroit Tigers, who have had a difficult time finding a place for his fielding, a 4-to-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

York's heavy blow came after Jack Wilson had walked Pete Fox and Dixie Walker, and Charlie Gehringer had singled.

Manager Joe Cronin hammered out a home run for Boston in the second, but the bases were empty. In the fifth Ben Chapman singled, advanced on a bad throw by Ross and came in on a single by Joe Vosmik. In the ninth Roger Cramer scored Bobby Doer on a single. Both Cletus Elwood Poffenberger and Wilson pitched the entire game.

Tribe Beats Yanks, 8-3; Feller Hurt

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 22.—The Cleveland Indians increased their American League lead to two games today by walloping the New York Yankees, 8 to 3, in a series-opening game which was costly to both sides.

Bob Feller retired after working three innings when he complained of the recurrence of a back injury, and Lou Gehrig, the Yankee iron man, pulled a Charley horse on a double in the sixth inning and gave way to Babe Dahlgren in the seventh. It was Gehrig's 1,992nd consecutive game.

Rookie Johnnie Humphries replaced Feller, who had nursed a sore back for two weeks. Manager Oscar Vitt ordered the young speedball hurler out of the game as a precautionary measure. In the first three innings, Feller held the world champions to one pop single.

Humphries worked two and two-thirds innings and was replaced by Mel Harder, who pitched three full frames. Although Harder entered the game with the score 8 to 3, the official scorer awarded him the victory, but he said he would ask William Harridge, league president, for a final ruling.

Paced by Earl Averill, the Indians nailed Monte Pearson, a former teammate, Bumps Hadley and Ivy Andrews for 11 hits. Averill's two singles drove in four runs.

Steel Output Holds Steady At 30 Per Cent

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 22.—The magazine Steel today said it believed independent mills would adopt third-quarter price schedules on strip and sheets similar to those announced last week by Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation.

The new prices, the magazine said, are designed to correct inequalities that have grown up during development of continuous mills. New extras and deductions have been set up to simplify and unify prices for closely related product. Settlement of doubts as to prices, however, is not expected to cause much additional buying, the publication said.

The national steel operating rate last week neld at 30 per cent. Pittsburgh climbed 5 points to 30 per cent and Cincinnati operating on a staggered schedule, advanced 20 points to 45 per cent. Chicago lost 2.5 points to 29 per cent, Youngstown 1 point to 26, Buffalo 2.5 points to 25.5 and Birmingham, Ala., 3 points to 63 per cent. Unchanged were Wheeling 38, Eastern Pennsylvania 27, Cleveland 23, New England 30, St. Louis 33.3 and Detroit at 18 per cent.

Steelmaking scrap, which had been considered practically at a bottom developed a further decline in its composite price, following a drop of 50 cents at Pittsburgh and 25 cents at Chicago. The composite price lost 22 cents, dropping to $11.37, which is $2.38 below the first week in January.

Lumber Shipments Are 54% of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended May 14 stood at 55.5 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 54 per cent of average 1929 shipments. Production was about 54 per cent of the corresponding week of 1929; shipments, about 50 per cent of that week's shipments. Reported production was slightly heavier in the week ended May 14, 1938, than in the preceding week; new orders and shipments were less.

New business was 4 per cent below output; shipments 6 per cent below. All items in the week ended May 14, 1938, were appreciably lower than during the corresponding week of 1937.

National production reported for the 1938 week by 7 per cent fewer mills was 2 per cent above the output of the preceding week; shipments were 5 per cent below shipments, and new orders were 7 per cent below orders of the previous week, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important hardwood and softwood mills. In the week ended May 14, 1938, production, shipments and orders as reported by 435 softwood mills were, respectively, 37, 35 and 26 per cent below similar items in corresponding week of 1937.

N. Y. Bank Stocks Lower for Week

New York, May 22.—New York City Bank stocks again moved lower during the past week, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on May 20 was $1,270,631,000 compared with $1,288,440,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $17,809,000, or 1.38 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.19 per cent compares with a yield of 5.12 per cent on May 13. The current market value is now 91 per cent of the known book value, compared with 92 per cent a week ago. Based upon current figures the 16 issues are now quoted at an average of 13.3 times their known earnings against 13.5 times on May 13.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also continued lower during the past week. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on May 20 amounted to $510,661,000 compared with $517,604,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $6,943,000, or 1.34 per cent.

124 Furnaces Idle In Lake Ore Area

Cleveland, May 22 (AP).—The Lake Superior Iron Ore Association reported today there were only 64 furnaces in blast April 30, the smallest number since records of the association have been kept. During the month seven furnaces were blown out, making 124 idle. A year ago 150 were in operation. The furnaces make pig iron for steel.

Union of Small Stockholders Urged as Protective Measure

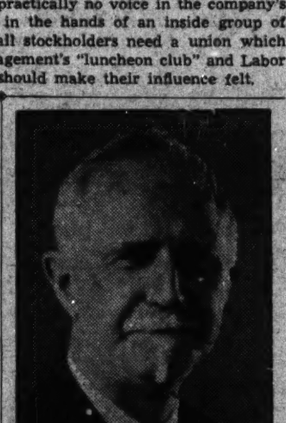
By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., May 22.—The average small stockholder is a sucker! He puts his money into the securities of companies about which he knows little or nothing. The information he receives is vague, incomplete and meaningless. He has practically no voice in the company's affairs. Decisions are concentrated in the hands of an inside group of officials, bankers and lawyers. Small stockholders need a union which would take its place beside the management's "luncheon club" and Labor Local No. 102. These stockholders should make their influence felt.

One of the major faults of the railroads today is absentee ownership. Banker and lawyer managements have run many roads into the ash heap. Stupid handling of labor problems has raised havoc with the carriers. Few of these directors would handle their own money as they have handled their stockholders' funds. The same is true of the directors of utility, motor, movie, food, and other mammoth concerns. We growl about graft in public places; but do the net results thereof exceed the huge salaries which have been paid in private places?



ROGER W. BABSON.

Stockholders' Satatus.

We used to hear a lot about how this and the "captain of industry" built his company. We saluted Mr. So-and-So because his company was a trail-blazer in scientific research. We never heard, however, about the thousands of John Q. Stockholders, who owned the corporation. It was their money which paid the huge advertising bills. It was their money that financed the research laboratories. Often the only bouque these stockholders receive is the corporation's annual report. It starts off every year as follows: "During the past year your company, etc., etc." Some stockholders actually believe the "your company" stuff.

It is too bad that the small stockholders do not make themselves more useful. They could do so if they would only be more obnoxious to the clique which runs their company. It is a shame that the thousands of little fellows cannot have militant representatives at the temples of the mighty. It is unfortunate that an investor's union with a real punch behind it cannot ask the president why he feels that he should receive a bigger annual salary than the average stockholder receives in his entire lifetime. The president may not be an investor; he may not be an engineer; he may not be a salesman; he may not even be a particularly hard worker. Just what does he do to earn his enormous salary?

Offices an "Eye-Opener."

It is too bad that the country shareowner cannot visit "his" company's general offices. It would give him many new ideas on redecorating his own offices down in Okalona, Miss. Deep plush chairs, richly finished mahogany furniture, thick soft rugs, Venetian blinds, air conditioning, receptionists with Park avenue accents—all this would make quite a sensation back home. It might even create a ripple of interest among Washington architects! But without these luxuries our Mississippi friend has been able to sell his product at a low price. He has not been cheating his customers. He has kept his overhead down and has put quality into his product.

But many people tell you there is no real need for a stockholders' union. Do they think that no corporation chieftain would install his own son as vice president of the company? Do not think this occurs only in public life! Do they believe that no business official would pad his expense account? Do not believe that only politicians can get big mileage allowances! Do they imagine that no employe would be fired for holding liberal ideas? Do not imagine that is all propaganda and nonsense put out by the National Labor Relations Board! Have not bankers been guilty of wrong decisions? Have not corporations tried unduly to influence public opinion?

World Is Slowly Improving.

Big Business has plenty for which to answer. Corporation executives have done things that public officials could never get away with. By high-handed and self-indulgent policies they have hurt the cause of business in America to the tune of untold billions. President Roosevelt, on his part, has also unfortunately hurt business and increased unemployment by his relentless, intemperate antagonism. To watch over their own interests, therefore, investors need a protective organization just as workers need unions and political parties need machines!

Yet, I am an optimist. The very fact that your newspaper is publishing this article shows the world is progressing! In 1929, the Nation had no conscience about these things. To criticize graft or inefficiency in high places was considered reason. Now, this has largely changed. Our Nation has been experiencing a slow-moving character improvement during the past eight years. The very fact that people today criticize what they applauded ten years ago is one basic reason why I believe we are headed for better business and higher security prices!

Bob Burns Says—

The reason it takes so long to try a case in court is not on account of the long speeches the lawyers make, but because it takes so much time to explain what the lawyers are talkin' about.

One time grandpa Snazzy was called as a witness and the lawyer says, "Now, Mr. Snazzy, did you or did you not, on the date in question or at any time previously or subsequently, say or even intimate to the defendant or anyone else, whether friend or mere acquaintance or in fact a stranger, that the statement imputed to you, whether just or unjust and denied by the plaintiff was a matter of no moment or otherwise. Answer—did you or did you not?"

Grandpa thought a while and he says, "Did I or did I not what?"

600,000 Open Japanese Drive Upon Hankow

Seven Armies Advancing on Irregular Front of 1,500 Miles.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Monday), May 23.—Seven Japanese armies estimated to total more than 600,000 men today widened their great drive on China's provisional capital in Hankow and attacked along an irregular line of more than 1,500 miles.

The four Japanese armies which co-operated in the capture of Suchow, key city in the eastern Chinese Lunghai line, were split into scores of columns and detachments which were mopping up an estimated 250,000 Chinese troops in this region and stabbing westward in a series of encircling movements designed to end in the occupation of Kweiteh and Kaifeng, breaking the center of the Lunghai line.

The fifth army operating northeast of Nanking had completed occupation of the Wuhu-Loho Railway and was cutting westward toward the southern reaches of the Peiping-Hankow Railway south of the Yellow River.

New Army on River.

The Sixth army, after two months of mopping up operations in the Shanghai-Hangchow-Nanking triangle south of the Yangtze River, was moving westward to occupy the south bank of the Yellow River east and west of Anking, capital of Anhwei Province.

The Seventh army, newly organized from troops just arrived from Japan, was moving southward from Peiping along the Peiping-Hankow Railway. Its vanguard reached the Yellow River and held a line on the north bank of that stream from a point east of Chengchow to one west of Tungkwan.

This army was expected to take a major part in the drive on Hankow. Its center was in Hanghsien, north of Loyang, and had batteries in place dominating the big ford across the Yellow River at that point.

Its right wing was resting on Puchow, terminus of a narrow gauge railway in southwest Shansi Province, and its left wing was joined to the right wing of the Japanese army, which was astride the Yellow River northeast of Kaifeng.

If a crossing can be effected at the Loyang ford the Chinese line will be severed again—this time in its western half—and the whole of the Lunghai defense will collapse leaving the Japanese virtually an open road to Hankow.

A Japanese spokesman here asserted the columns of the four Japanese armies operating along the eastern Lunghai front were winning continuous victories and the occupation of the new Chinese eastern divisional headquarters in Kaifeng was only a matter of days.

Caught Between Columns.

The third army under Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara occupied Lanfeng yesterday, winning the biggest battle since Suchow, while the second and third armies, under Maj. Gen. Rensuke Isogai and Gen. Shunroku Hata, were "annihilating" the Chinese forces encircled in the Suchow three-way offensive.

The whole area west of the Tientsin-Pukow railway to the south of Suchow was a battle field with Chinese caught between the Japanese forces in this area and columns of the Japanese Fifth army to the westward.

To the north there was heavy fighting along the 75-mile Yellow River front from Lanfeng to Chengchow. The combined forces of the Japanese Fourth and Seventh Armies were shelling the Lunhai Railway, which parallels the south bank of the river, and had stopped all traffic.

The Japanese said 70,000 Chinese infantrymen were decimated at Langfeng and said they soon would have cleared all Chinese forces north and west of this vital district making it impossible for the Chinese to dynamite the Yellow River dikes and flood the Japanese positions in the Suchow area.

Meantime, the Chinese admitted the Japanese Seventh Army, the organization of which was reported to them only yesterday, was causing them the greatest concern.

Earlier they had believed this force to be a mere skeleton organization sent into Shansi Province to reoccupy areas abandoned by the Japanese last month. The occupation of Manghsien, however, revealed that this army was a major force sent against the western end of the Lunghai line by the Japanese northern commander, Lieut. Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi.

Loyalists Flee Pincer Thrust in Insurgents' Area

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France, May 22.—Loyalist troops tonight were reported to have abandoned Ares del Maestre, spearhead of the government's salient stabbing deep behind the insurgent advance along the Mediterranean, to escape a pincer attack.

Insurgent Navarrese columns, operating 22 miles inland along the Teruel-Mediterranean line, crossed the Rio de la Rambla, a raging torrent curving in and out among the mountains south of Ares del Maestre, to threaten the flank of a strong loyalist force in the rugged sector.

The loyalists were reported to have fled south to the heights around Albocacer, key to the defenses of Castellon de la Plana and Valencia along the coast.

Albocacer, almost within range of the flank of Gen. Franco's armies poised along two main highways adjoining the sea for the drive on Valencia, has stalled the insurgent offensive for three weeks.

With the abandoning of Ares del Maestre, the loyalist salient disappeared and the Teruel-Mediterranean battlefront became almost a straight line from Teruel to Albocacer.

Simultaneously, Franco's troops at the extreme western end of the line announced smashing of the government's "iron ring" of defenses circling Corbalan, 8 miles northeast of Teruel, and complete occupation of the key highway terminus.

Diplomats Ask Co-operation of All Americas

Pan-American Bank to Aid in Developing Natural Resources Urged.

Hopeful pictures of economic advancement through co-operation of Pan-American countries were painted yesterday by Dr. Don Adrian Recinos, Guatamalan Minister, and Elie Lescot, Haitian Minister, speaking over radio station WJSV.

A third speaker—Dr. Sanvador Agirrie, foreign minister of Honduras—whose address was transmitted to Washington by short wave, urged establishment of a Pan-American bank to assist in developing natural resources of American countries. Dr. Agirrie said South American nations were eager for immigration of American capital, and praised the "good-neighbor" policy of the Roosevelt Administration.

Dr Recinos saw in the development of economic co-operation the possibility that the depression in the coffee industry of South American countries would be ended. He recommended that the problem be met through agreements between producing countries, limiting exports of coffee to "a ratio proportionate to consumption throughout the world."

He added that "the coffee-consuming countries should give preference to the coffee that comes from countries which in reciprocity give preference to their products."

Lescot declared Pan-Americanism had emerged "from the realm of pure ideals to that of reality."

"I desire to make a solemn declaration of my country's faith in inter-American co-operation for the solution of the many and diverse economic problems which are arising in one or another of the nations of this continent," he said.

"Europe has never been able to understood the aims of Pan-Americanism or its methods, because the concept of the relations between states differs in the two hemispheres. Europe has never been able to conceive of co-operation between nations without the weak being dominated by the strong."

Rule of Despots Seen Transitory By Rabbi Metz

No permanent values can accrue from the rule of might in the world, was the theme of a men's day address last night by Rabbi Metz, of Adas-Israel Synagogue, at Lincoln Temple Congregational Church.

He cited the American constitutional form of government by the people as the form to survive when all others have been destroyed by the forces which carried them to transitory pre-eminence.

Judge William C. Hueston, who spoke on "Adventures of Life," urged his audience of colored men and women to enter daringly into new fields of commerce, agriculture and industry, with insistence upon being the beneficiaries of those lines which the needs of the Negro create.

"If the Negro were permitted," he said, "through extension of credit facilities, to live at the average American standard, there is $7,200,000,000 worth of trade each year within this group, three times more than the present foreign trade which America enjoys.

"If we can create in the American mind the fact that 8,000,000 Negroes who live in the backwoods, and 2,000,000 who live in the alleys, should be better housed, fed and educated, we shall have created enterprises and adventures which will keep employed for many years all of the unemployed of the country."

Fascist Newspaper Assails Woodring

Rome, May 22 (AP).—The newspaper La Voce D'Italia today called upon United States Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring to cease generalities and "name names" in his references to aggressor nations.

The newspaper, edited by the authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, was prompted by Woodring's speech in Boston yesterday in which he warned aggressors might be tempted by America's natural resources.

Foreign 'Isms' Assailed Here By Gen. Fries

Union and Constitution Must Be Guarded, He Tells G. A. R. Ladies.

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries yesterday warned that Americans now must show the same fixed purpose to save the Nation from foreign "isms" that Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant showed in their fight to save the Union.

Gen. Fries spoke at the annual joint meeting of U. S. Grant Circle No. 1 and Abraham Lincoln Circle No. 3, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, held in the rotunda of the Capitol.

Gen. Fries pointed out that Lincoln and Grant had never been swayed fromtheir central idea of guarding the Union. "In these days of confusion, we should have the same determination to save the Nation and the Constitution as they were given to us," he declared.

Other speakers included Mme. Julia Cantacuzene, granddaughter of Gen. Grant; Everett Warner, of the G. A. R.; Mrs. Alice M. Burke, president of U. S. Grant Circle; Mrs Sarah S. Deeds, president of Abraham Lincoln Circle; Mrs Susanna V. Meyers, president, Department of Potomac, Ladies of G. A. R., and Mrs. Emma Hayward, past department president.

U. S. Tourists Halted In Mexican Club Strike

Tijuana, Mex., May 22 (U.P.).—American tourists were turned back from the gates of the popular Rosarita Beach Club today by striking workers picketing the grounds.

Twenty-six workers and members of their families were joined by a similar number of sympathizers from Tijuana in enforcing a determined policy to permit no patrons to enter the club until their demands are met. The club manager said he had no intention of trying to reopen the establishment until the courts rule on the demands June 10.

137 Lay, Church Leaders Score Anti-Semitism

A protest against oppression of Jews in many sections of the world, signed by 137 American lay and clerical leaders, was received yesterday by Dr. Stephen S. Wise, president of the American Jewish Congress.

Describing persecution of Jews as a "blot on civilization, the signers offered their "profoundest sympathy to suffering Jewry." "What is happening to the Jewish people, tragic as it is for millions of them, is even more tragic to the world at large as a symbol of the efforts that are being made to destroy democracy, peace and humanity itself," the statement declared.

Among the signers were the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington; the Right Rev. John A. Ryan, director of the social action department of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; the Rev. William H. Allison, consultant in church history at the Library of Congress, and the Rev. Dr. F. B. Harris, of Foundry Methodist Church, all of Washington, the signers included 22 bishops and presidents of 22 colleges.

They said: "The brutal disregard of human rights, and the dignity of human life, wherein Jews are concerned, in so many sections of the world, is the rightful concern of the Christian Church.

"The hitsory of the world has shown us, and the history of the past five years has reminded us, that civilization itself is endangered when the foundations of civilized society are destroyed in any section of the world."

The group praised the efforts of the American Jewish Congress "to unite the resources of the Jewish community of this country in a democratic front against anti-Semitism."

Egyptian Princess To Wed Eldest Son Of Shah of Persia

Cairo, Egypt, May 22 (AP).—Egypt's royal family may celebrate its second wedding of the year, it was reported today, in the marriage of King Farouk's eldest sister, 16-year old Princess Fawzia, and Shahpur Mohammed Hiza, eldest son of Shah Reza Khan Pahlevi of Persia.

The marriage would unite two of the "modern" dynasties of the Near East. King Farouk is the tenth ruler of the dynastiy of Mohammed Ali, who made himself absolute master of Egypt by force of arms in 1811.
